Turbulent World
Talkative Ambassador
An Engineer's Job
A. P. Sloan, Jr.'s Problem

—By Arthur Brisbane—

AS PUBLISHERS KNOW, circulation of the right kind, especially home circulation, counts, in depressions, when merchants must sell goods. This is proved interestingly by the fact that the American Weekly, a magazine published with the Hearst Sunday newspapers, carried in August, 1932, over ten per cent more advertising than it carried in August of the boom year, 1929.

The weekly coming next, with about half the circulation of the American Weekly, carried in August, 1932, less than one-third of the advertising that it carried in August, 1929.

BIG CIRCULATION, especially home circulation, is what produces results.

The American Weekly circulates far above 5,000,000 copies a week, at 10 cents a copy, and it is all home circulation.

We live in a turbulent world, ladies and gentlemen, and more than a few kind words or debts forgiven are needed to smooth it out.

In Manchuria bandits wreck trains, kill many. Twenty-six of them are killed.

Far more important is the German news that Von Papen, head of the aristocratic "Baron" government, dissolves the Reichstag extraterritorially. That is as though Herbert Hoover or the Secretary of State should tell the Congress to go home when in full session. The Reichstag votes, 513 to 32, to put Von Papen out.

The Hitler crowd joins the "Reds" in upsetting the present aristocratic government. The latter hints it may stay in office by force. There will be real shooting if it starts in Germany.

Mr. Edge, our ambassador in Paris, presenting to France an expensive memorial built by the United States near Meaux, supposedly in recognition of the Statue of Liberty sent to us, took occasion to say that when the American people see a territory overrun, they "instinctively resolve to throw their moral, and, if need be, their material weight on the side of the invaded."

This half-way promise that if somebody attacks France or some other European country, the United States will rush in as it did in the last war, is fortunately not official.

Mr. Edge is mistaken. And, what is more, any President or public official that should undertake to send men and money from the United States into another war, without letting the American people vote on it, would be kicked out of office, and ought to be impeached for treason. ONCE IS ENOUGH.

Washington suggests that President Hoover may put Calvin Coolidge in charge of a committee to rehabilitate railroads, restore their prosperity and full usefulness. Mr. Coolidge's advice would be very valuable.

But what railroads need is NEW METHODS. Mr. C. F. Kettering, head engineer of General Motors, or some engineer of equal ability, if he can be found, should be invited to form an organization of engineers to suggest plans for railroad RECONSTRUCTION.

The railroads ignored automobiles and motor trucks until it was too late to do anything but weep about them, treating automobiles just as the old stage coach owners treated the locomotives. First scorn, then sorrow.

Mr. Kettering, with engineers selected from Standard Oil, General Electric, Westinghouse, United States Steel, and a few other great inventive centers, would replace the heavy coach weighing 150,000 pounds, carrying 2400 pounds of passengers with a coach of duralumin, weighing 10,000 pounds, carrying more passengers. Modern engineers would change the foolish, slow, long string of cars and locomotive weighing millions of pounds running hours apart, to light, high-speed, single-units running 15 or 20 minutes apart, at 150 miles an hour.

The country needs a new railroad system. The old kind cannot be restored any more than the dinosaur or the stage coach could be restored to usefulness.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, has been appointed head of a committee to study "the problems arising from war debts owed by European nations to the United States." A better man could not have been chosen.

Mr. Sloan will probably report about as follows: "Europe owes us the billions of dollars. United States taxpayers were forced to pay that money, and are paying interest on it now. European nations should repay it, or continue owing it under such pressure as we can properly bring to bear to force payment."

The "air family," father, mother and two children, that started for Europe by airplane, has been found.

Those seeking glory by transatlantic flight should not take children or other helpless beings, not even a dog. An adult may risk his life only.

DUBOIS LOVE GIRL FOUND, COLLAPSES

Grace Atwood's Rich Middleboro Father Tells of the Romance; Wife's Body Hunted Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American. All rights reserved.

The Boston Evening American today found the mysterious blonde "Grace," central figure in the investigation of the murder of Edith DuBois, whose husband was grilled but released because the missing woman's body has not been found.

The girl is Grace Atwood, 25, daughter of L. O. Atwood, wealthy manufacturer, of Rock, a section of Middleboro.

She is in a state of collapse, but her father told a Boston Evening American reporter that she was the mystery girl that had planned to marry DuBois, believing his wife dead as the result of an auto accident, as DuBois claims.

"Neither my daughter nor I believe DuBois had anything to do with Mrs. DuBois' death," said the girl's father.

TELLS POLICE ALL

"My daughter has been seen by police and has answered all their questions in a straightforward manner. She told them that DuBois told her his wife died after an auto smashup.

"I did not know of their romance until two weeks ago. Then she told me she had made arrangements to marry Charles DuBois.

"My daughter is too ill to talk, but I will speak for her."

Grace Atwood, it was further learned, is a graduate of a New York University graduate school.

GAVE HER AUTO

Her father said he knew nothing about transfer of Mrs. DuBois' property to Grace, but said his daughter told him of a gift of a new automobile which DuBois was going to make to her.

Atwood said that his daughter did not go to DuBois' Tuckahoe, N. Y., home with the jeweler, but went to New York last week about some business.

BULLETIN

Provincetown, Sept. 13 (AP)—An airplane believed to be The American Nurse passed out to sea near the Wood End Coast Guard station at 8:55 o'clock, Eastern standard time, today.

New York, Sept. 13 (INS)—The airplane American Nurse, carrying Dr. Leon M. Piscuill surgeon, of Yonkers, N. Y.; William Ulbrich, pilot, of New York, and Miss Edna Newcomer, Williamsport, Pa., took off on a non-stop flight to Rome from Floyd Bennett Field at 7:16 a. m. today.

With the weather forecaster predicting ideal conditions for the flight, Ulbrich was hopeful of establishing a record on the trip.

The flight is one of the most unusual ever attempted, as the plane is to serve Dr. Piscuill as a psychological laboratory in the air. He proposes to study the reaction of fatigue on both Ulbrich and Miss Newcomer during the trip.

The plane was to follow the southern route, crossing the Atlantic along the ship lane. There is no radio aboard.

Miss Newcomer was on the stage before becoming a nurse and was known as "the girl with the million-dollar legs." She plans to make a parachute jump when the plane passes over Venice to demonstrate the practicability of landing nurses from planes into inaccessible stricken areas.

The last person to bid farewell to the trio seated in the plane was tall, blonde Lillian Holman, New York, fiance of Dr. Piscuill.

HOOVER ACT STIRS FIGHT IN LEGION

Veterans to Demand an Early Bonus and Repeal; Big Parade Held Today

Portland, Ore., Sept. 13—The American Legion was lined up today to go dripping wet, demand immediate cash payment of the bonus and fight out the issue of censuring President Hoover on the floor of its 14th annual convention.

Newspaper polls disclosed an overwhelming majority of the state delegations favored outright repeal, but on such conditions as would protect dry states and prevent the return of the saloon. However worded, the Legion apparently will put its official endorsement of repeal on the Democratic prohibition plank.

TEN TO ONE FOR BONUS

The poll further revealed the cash bonus demand would be approved by a terrific majority—more than ten to one.

The President appeared safe from censure for using federal troops to oust the bonus marchers from Washington. There was a bare possibility the convention might condemn his use of troops.

The poll follows:

Subject	Ayes	Noes	D'id'l	Tot'l
Repeal 18th amd	868	139	733	16
Cash bonus	1128	61	43	233
Cens. use troops	188	542	481	198
Censure Pres't	28	80	690	141

The presence of Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, who was cheered and booed in an appearance on the opening day of the convention, and who took exception to remarks of Floyd Gibbons, writer and radio speaker, over the bonus army evictions, heightened interest in controversial questions.

STOCK LOSSES CUT BY RALLY

New York, Sept. 13—Share prices rallied in afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange today and forenoon losses of from 1 to 6 or more points were about halved. Transactions for the first three periods approximated 4,000,000 shares. Auburn Auto recorded a maximum loss of over 13 points but rallied about 5 points from the day's low.

Consolidated Gas, after selling down over 6 points, rallied over 2. American Telephone reduced an early loss of over 4 points to around 2 points. U. S. Steel sold down over 4 in early trading and about halved the loss later in the session.

Weakness in the commodity and bonds market combined with the Democratic victories in the Maine elections were seen as contributory causes to the securities market drop.

ROW SEETHES OVER CALLING OF TROOPS

Glassford, Capital Police Head, Refutes Charges in Mitchell Report That He Assented

Washington, Sept. 13—The storm of protest that broke with the release of Atty.-Gen. Mitchell's report branding members of the Bonus Expeditionary Force as criminals surged back and forth in the capital today, with Brig.-Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, head of the district police, as the center of the controversy.

Gen. Glassford's assertion that the Mitchell report was "in conflict with police records or with facts known to the police department" brought up the question of just who did order cavalry troops in the Bonus Army disturbances of July 28.

Other developments in the situation were:

1—Gen. Glassford's denial that he had replied in the affirmative when asked the direct question whether he thought it was necessary to secure the assistance of Federal troops.

2—Publication of Washington police records disclosing that crime actually decreased while the veterans were encamped in the capital.

3—Flat denial by B. E. F. officials that government officials had made any attempt to

ME. LEADER THANKS AMERICAN

Portland, Me. Sept. 13—Chairman John I. Dooley of the Democratic State Committee of Maine today made the following statement in behalf of the Democrats of Maine and of all its citizens interested in good government:

John H. Dooley

"I desire to thank the Boston Evening American for the clarity and impartiality with which it presented the news and the developments of this very significant and momentous election. I think the Boston Evening American should take the credit itself as being the only newspaper which in its pre-election forecast declared that the Democratic party of Maine had a reasonable prospect of victory. To have made such a prediction in a state which has been for so many years so overwhelmingly Republican as Maine required both courage and intimate knowledge of the conditions existing in this state."

Washington, Sept. 13 (AP)—White House officials said today there would be "no comment" on the election returns from Maine.

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Portland, Me., Sept. 13—The Democrats have carried the State of Maine in the most extraordinary and sensational political overturn in the history of the Commonwealth.

Maine has elected a Democratic Governor for the first time in 18 years and the only time in a presidential year since the Civil War.

Judge Louis J. Brann of Lewiston, Democratic nominee for Governor, had a small but comfortable lead, with the returns tabulated from all but 21 of the 632 election precincts of the State.

In the extraordinary political overturn, Edward C. Moran, Jr., Democrat, has defeated Congressman John E. Nelson, Republican dean of Maine's congressional delegation, and will be the first Democrat to sit in Congress from Maine since Daniel J. McGillicuddy introduced his square-topped derby to Washington 18 years ago.

In the 3rd District, former Governor Ralph O. Brewster received the third major setback in his political career. John G. Utterback, Democrat, former Mayor of Bangor, drove ahead in today's returns and had a majority of 1128, with 19 precincts missing.

The only Republican sure of victory in Maine's three Congressional districts is Cong. Carroll L. Beedy who defeated Judge Joseph E. F. Connolly of Portland by 2081 on the face of complete returns.

Congressman-elect Moran's signal victory today makes a sharp turn for the better in his political fortunes for he was twice defeated in Democratic campaigns for Governor in recent years.

On the other hand, a third severe defeat was administered to Governor Brewster. After two terms as Governor he aspired to the United States Senate, but was twice rejected in Republican primaries.

Moran's election plurality in the

VETS GAVE THEIR YOUTH; THEIR ALL—NOW HONOR IS TAKEN

Bonus Marchers Victims of Outrageous Attack, Says Elsie Robinson

By ELSIE ROBINSON
Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

New York, Sept. 13—There was a day in 1917 when you and I stood on the edge of a city street and shouted until we were hoarse.

Thousands of other Americans were massed beside us . . . Two solid walls of humanity, on either side of the street . . . Walls that rocked and heaved and swayed with our hurrahing.

Elsie Robinson

Streaming down between those walls, like a golden river in their new khaki, with drums booming and horns singing and flags foaming against the bright blue sky, went our boys!

The boys of America—young and eager and gay—going laughing off to war! The youth of America, leaving its home, its school, its proud, first job, turning its back on young dreams and young love—marching off to fight for you and for me.

And you and I standing there, shoulder to shoulder, heart to heart, watching them go—shouting our pride!

And there was a day in 1918 when we stood on the edge of a city pavement, trembling with pity, choking back our tears.

Thousands of other Americans standing beside us—dark, watching walls of men and women from which came cheers that were wails and a silence that was one long groan.

And down between those dark walls, many of them with feet dragging, eyes listless, came our boys.

Youth That Never Would Be Young Again Crawl Back

The boys of America, those that were left, broken and weary

COLD GROUND THEIR BED

Another picture which is evidence of the claims of Elsie Robinson when she writes, "Their helpless wives and children routed pell-mell into the darkness of night before the trampling hoofs of United States cavalry troops." Here is an entire family photographed on the outskirts of Washington on the night following the routing by tear gas, bayonets and tanks.

and haunted with horrors they would never forget, crawling back from war.

The youth of America that would never again be young, crawling back to the home it no longer fitted,

TEAR GAS VICTIMS

Here is evidence to prove the contention of the writer of this article, when she says "American heroes driven out of the Bonus Army capital—tear-gassed and bayoneted." Here is an American soldier—1932 variety with bayoneted gun—as a trio of the Bonus Army members rush out of gas sector.

to the job someone else held, to a dream it could not remember, to a love that looked at it with strange and startled eyes.

But at least they were back! And you and I sobbed our gratitude for that. Touched the soiled khaki and the shattered flesh with pitying hands. And promised—

How we promised!

Promised that we'd make up to them for all they had suffered and lost. Promised that we would never forget—that as long as American blood ran red, American hearts would remember the boys who had saved their land.

Listening, hope woke again in those listless eyes—youth broke again in those lagging limbs.

And again there was a day in 1932. A day when we stood on a littered bank overlooking a blackened field where, for a few starved months, 7000 to 15,000 men had made their pitiful homes.

Homes of tin cans and sacks and packing boxes for the men who had saved the hearths of America. Meals of slops, rations of raw wheat mixed with cold water, for the men whose youth was rotted away in the front-line trenches of France.

That was what had come of our promises!

America's heroes, driven out like dogs from their last foothold in their country's capital . . . Tear-gassed and bayonetted . . . Their shelters burned behind them . . . Their helpless wives and children routed pell-mell into the darkness, before the trampling hoofs of cavalry.

Three scenes that will stand forever in American history. And now today, there comes the most pitiful, the most shameful act of all.

Now to Be Stripped of All That's Left—Their Honor

It was not enough that these men gave their youth to a hideous war . . . That they returned demoralized to a land in which they could not find their place . . . That for the last three years they and their children had come nearer and nearer to death by starvation.

Now they are to be stripped of the only thing they have left—their honor!

This week the American Legion is meeting in convention in Portland, Ore. It meets in anger. There are bitter memories of that day in Anacostia. And the men who fought for America will challenge the men who are running America. Perhaps, demand an explanation. Perhaps, issue such an indictment of a government as no body of citizens has ever before issued.

To an administration on the eve of election, this means a dangerous impasse. That indictment must be prevented. Anacostia must be explained away. And there is only one way to do it—

The Bonus Expeditionary Force must be made to seem an abomination and a menace in the eyes of the American people. And the administration must assume the role of savior in ridding Washington of that menace.

And so, at the request of President Hoover, Atty. Gen. Mitchell has prepared a report in which the attorney general declares that an extraordinary proportion of these men were—not soldiers but imposters . . . Communists and Radicals . . . Ex-Convicts . . . Criminals. Not soldiers?

That statement is not only outrageous—it is absurd. And the dullest citizen can see the reason for its absurdity.

Those men went to Washington, expecting at least partial payment on their compensation certificates.

In order to get such payment they had to have certificates. They also had to have honorable discharges from the army to back those certificates. And those certificates and discharges had to check with army records.

STARVATION RATIONS

Members of the Bonus Army ate stale bread and rations of raw wheat and cold water at times. They had faced starvation for three years, but in Washington, appealing for national aid, their rations were of the worst. Friends of the Bonus Army alone saved their lives by furnishing some suitable food.

There was no way out of this. Certificates might have been faked—discharges might have been forged. But no documents which were not absolutely authentic could possibly have gotten by the War Department and Veterans' Bureau or resulted in bonus payment.

Faked records?

Terrible Indictment of Administration's Ignorance

I saw records which could not be faked. I stood in the B. E. F. first aid tent, donated by a great-hearted American, after the Red Cross had refused to give such a tent. I saw the papers, the honorable discharges, the medals of these hungry, ragged men as they came seeking aid. I saw something more terrible and convincing than papers and medals.

Steel braces holding together shattered spines—
Ridged scars coiled like snakes around gaunt bodies—
Pit holes of blasted flesh into which you could have thrust your fist—
Silver plates that covered gaping skulls, but could not cover the hell of empty eyes—
Ragged stumps of legs that had once held flying feet.
And yet they dare to say—faked records!

Then, lest you and I press that claim too hard, comes the counter-claim that those men came to Washington "to live off the community."

That statement, if sincere, is a terrible indictment of the administration's ignorance of the condition in which these men did live. Not until the last few days, when they became desperate from prolonged starvation, did those men ask for food—though their eyes were hollow with hunger and their bodies afflicted by the sores of malnutrition.

Immediately upon the arrival of the B. E. F. in Washington, they set up headquarters for themselves. Adjacent to those headquarters was a general commissary. This writer, assigned for weeks on that story, visited the commissary daily, saw the food

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 13 (AP)—An estate of approximately $5,000,000 more than the estimates at the time of his death, was left by George Eastman, the kodak magnate, according to the transfer tax affidavit filed today with Surrogate Joseph M. Feely.

Of the total estate, $8,319,553.92 was in cash, the affidavit showed.

Eastman committed suicide by shooting himself at his home here last March 14. He was 77.

Because a part of the estate is tax exempt by reason of being bequeathed to educational and philanthropic institutions, the state collects a tax of only $14,212.86 on the taxable estate of $585,321.60.

A gross value of $24,403,748.80 in personal property and $1,457,862.80 in real estate is shown. The value of exempt bequests is $20,790,581.46.

Eastman had more than $8,000,000 in cash at his death. He carried only $16,051 in life insurance, all payable to his niece, Mrs. Ellen Andrus Dryden, of Evanston.

GANDHI'S FAST MAY BRING WAR

Bombay, Sept. 13 (INS)—India was thrust on the verge of a civil war today, a war which threatened to rage about the head of its great Nationalist hero, Mahatma Gandhi.

His followers hailed with joyous acclaim Gandhi's decision to go on a fast to the death in protest against the new electoral plan of the British government, and believed his attempt at martyrdom would result in the various religious and political factions in India getting together to solve their problem themselves, as demanded by Britain.

In the midst of this, however, Ambedkar, official leader of the "untouchables," India's great depressed class, hurled a bombshell by labeling Gandhi's projected fast a "political move" and refusing to take part in negotiations to have the separate electorate class abandon its stand.

"Gandhi's threat is not a moral fight, but a political move," Ambedkar said, "and I don't care for these political stunts."

Germany Is Faced by Big Crisis

Berlin, Sept. 13 (INS)—With its Reichstag dissolved, the German republic today faced continuation of the most bitter political conflict in its history.

It appeared, however, that immediate violence had been forestalled by acceptance of the governmental decree dissolving the Reichstag by its Speaker, Nazi Deputy Hermann Goering.

While bowing before the decree, Goering made it clear he considered the dissolution illegal, and accomplished only in fact.

The real issue at stake, according to the Nazis, still remained what it has been for several months, and which was expressed by Goering as follows:

"Shall the German people rule Germany, or shall a small group of exclusive club-members, former supporters of the Hohenzollern regime, hold the power?"

Shells Explode as Fire Ruins Truck

Brimfield, Sept. 13 (AP)—Intermittent explosion of two cases of shotgun shells as the flames reached them, enlivened a fire that destroyed a large truck of the Dyrolly Transportation Co. of Springfield, with its contents, valued at $10,000, on the post road here today.

The truck went off the highway and overturned. Nine bars of silver, two tons of meat and other items made up the cargo.

He was pretty far gone when he reached the Bar V ranch, and the danger of infection worried his physicians today.

CHURCH FUNDS $2,000,000 SHY

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 13 (AP)—The Province of Manitoba and the Church of England were attempting today to straighten out the affairs of John A. Machray, charged with misappropriating nearly $2,000,000 of the funds of the University of Manitoba and the church.

Premier John Bracken was planning steps the government will take to investigate the loss of more than $900,000 from the university endowment funds. Machray was chairman of the board of governors and bursar of the university.

A committee of 10 laymen of the Church of England will meet Friday night to investigate loss of about $1,000,000 of church funds under Machray's control.

The church finds itself in an embarrassing position regarding election of a bishop of Athabasca. The see is vacant and the church constitution forbids election of a bishop unless his income is guaranteed.

After the group was sworn by Court Clerk James S. Allen, Judge Hugh D. McLellan instructed the new grand jury, of which Harry C. Wiggin is foreman.

STEVENS URGES 5-DAY WEEK

By HENRY L. STEVENS, JR.
National Commander of the American Legion
(Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.)

Portland, Ore., Sept. 13 (US)—Our greatest work in 1932 from the standpoint of the public was the putting back to work of more than a million men, but from our own standpoint, it was the care of the veterans. We will adopt a program as constructive for the coming months as that for last year.

The greatest thing we have to put our shoulders to in the coming years is the doing away with unemployment. How? By a program calling for a six-hour day and a five-day week. This will do more to restore this country to prosperity than anything else. The American Legion has consistently advocated this plan.

CREATE MORE JOBS

The day is past when jobs can be solicited from house to house—that was the first phase of curing unemployment. We must actually enter the second phase by spreading out the work and creating more jobs.

I think the proper procedure would be for the President of the United States to call a conference of business leaders and employers and ask them to assist in the work of spreading out the jobs.

COULD END SLUMP

Yes, I think we could bring back prosperity by this means. And I think the business leaders would do it.

As far as the biggest work of this convention is concerned, I believe it is the care of our comrades and widows and orphans.

I don't know whether or not the convention will pass a motion censuring President Hoover for the ejection of the bonus army. But that doesn't make any difference as far as the American Legion's program for doing good and performing service for the people and its comrades is concerned; it's only a sidelight

Hitler Victorious in Suit Against Paper

Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 13—A court order that Adolph Hitler, Nazi leader, prove he did not draw subsidies from armament firms, has been revoked.

FLYING FAMILY FOUND SAFE AFTER PLANE CRASHES IN ICE

8 CHEAT DEATH OFF GREENLAND IN OCEAN TRIP

Trawler Locates Amphibion's Crew as All Hope Is Given Up; Craft Is Wrecked in Landing

Copyright, 1932 International News Service.

Copenhagen, Sept. 13 (INS)—The "Flying Hutchison Family" and their crew of four were found safe and well today by the British trawler Lord Talbot, at Eker, an Eskimo village. Their plane is a wreck.

News of the rescue of the Americans, including George R. Hutchinson of Baltimore, his wife and two daughters, was flashed to International News Service today in a brief message direct from Capt. Watson of the Lord Talbot.

It read as follows:

"Located Hutchinson at 1 a. m. All well. Now awaiting daylight. Signed, Watson."

This would place the rescue at 8 p. m., E. D. T., yesterday, about 33 hours after the first distress signals were flashed from the plane, "City of Richmond," as it was forced down off Greenland in a sea jammed with icebergs.

CRAFT FIRST ON SCENE

The Lord Talbot was the first to reach the location indicated in the messages. Although arriving shortly after receipt of the distress signals, the Lord Talbot found nothing.

Smaller craft and planes also aided in the search and after a full day had elapsed hope for the safety of the daring family was virtually abandoned.

Shortly after International News Service received Captain Watson's message, the Greenland board officially announced the rescue, adding the information that the huge amphibion was "absolutely smashed" in the forced landing. The announcement read:

"The eight members of Hutchinson's expedition were found on land at Ikersnak Fiord. Everybody was safe and sound. Machine absolutely smashed."

FIVE NATIONS IN HUNT

Discovery of the "Flying Family" brought to an end a search in which the men and facilities of five nations took part with rapidly diminishing hope.

Those aboard the stricken 10-passenger Sikorsky plane were Colonel Hutchinson, his wife and their two daughters, Kathryn, eight, and Janet Lee, six. They were accompanied by a crew of four, including Joseph Ruff, engineer; Peter Redpatch, navigator; G. J. Aldfisch, radio operator, and Norman W. Alley, photographer.

This picture, appearing exclusively in the Boston Evening American, was made at Indian River, Fla., some time ago, and was rushed to Plymouth to aid in the investigation of the mystery. Police search for the body of Mrs. Edith DuBois will include dragging of Morrison's Pond, near the DuBois home on Middle st., Braintree. Half of this pond is owned by Mrs. DuBois.

Doctor Home to Bare Bern's 'Secret'; Harlow Back on Job

Los Angeles, Sept. 13 (AP)—Arriving today from Honolulu, Dr. Edward P. Jones, personal physician to the late Paul Bern, motion picture executive and husband of Jean Harlow, will be interviewed by friends of Bern in an effort to learn a possible motive for his suicide a week ago Sunday.

Dr. Jones cabled from Honolulu the day after Bern's body was found that he "understood the motive" of the suicide. He said, however, he would reveal his information only to "the proper authorities." The police have announced their investigation closed with the return of the coroner's verdict of suicide. Dr. Jones was expected to consult with Coroner Frank Nance and give him whatever information he has.

Miss Harlow, whom Bern married two months ago, has resumed her work at the film studios.

"This staying around home is driving me crazy," she said. "I've got to get busy—to forget."

In San Francisco and Sacramento to the search for Dorothy Millette, a former common law wife of Bern, was being made to clear up her disappearance from a river steamer. She was reported seen in Sacramento yesterday, but police expressed the opinion she had committed suicide by jumping into the river shortly after Bern ended his own life.

QUIZ EXPERT IN M'KNIGHT CASE

George H. MacBeth, public accountant, resumed the stand today before Charles W. Blood, as master, in Bank Commissioner Guy's suit against Edwin T. McKnight, president of the closed Medford Trust Company, and 22 other officers and directors, to hold them responsible for the bank's losses.

Atty. A. A. Gillette, of defense counsel, cross-examined MacBeth on his testimony as to payment of dividends by the bank for several years, before it closed.

The cross-examination occupied the entire morning session of MacBeth's third day on the witness stand.

MUSICIAN DIES BESIDE RADIO

Listening by radio—to the music he loved, Charles Harrison Prescott, 66, blind pianist and musician of Winthrop, died last night in a chair at his home, it was revealed today.

The musician, blind since he was an infant, was found by his wife, Mrs. Viola Prescott, and their daughter Isabel when they returned to their home at 51 Crystal Cove ave., from a show. The radio was still on.

Dr. Daniel O'Brien, of Washington ave., Winthrop, declared death due to a heart attack.

The musician, son of the late George Prescott, Civil War veteran and an old-time stage coach driver over the Mohawk Trail, was a graduate of the Perkins Institution for the Blind.

Services will be conducted tomorrow, with burial in Winthrop Cemetery.

POLING HAS NEW ROBINS CLUE

Chicago, Sept. 13 (INS)—Asserting he had the most tangible clue since he arrived here to direct the search for Col. Raymond Robins, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, prohibition leader, left today on a secret mission to find the missing social worker.

Dr. Poling admitted his new activity followed a telephone conversation with New York.

It was learned from other cources that Dr. Poling had been checking telephone calls made and received by Col. Robins at the City Club in New York shortly before his disappearance on Sept. 3.

It was believed the new clue favors the theory that Col. Robins is a victim of amnesia.

Wife on Robins' Trail From Southwest Harbor, Me.

Southwest Harbor, Me., Sept. 13—Mrs. Margaret Dreier Robins, wife of Col. Raymond Robins, missing prohibitionist, was to leave today for Kennebunk Beach in her first personal effort to follow the trail of her husband.

She was to motor to the home of Salmon O. Levinson, Chicago attorney, to question him as to his last conversation with Col. Robins the day after he left Southwest Harbor.

Mrs. Robins still subscribes to the theory that gangsters, whose bootlegging business was hampered by Robins' activities in Hernando County, Fla., have kidnaped him, although she is trying to keep an open mind on the theory apparently growing more acceptable to authorities, that Col. Robins suffered an attack of amnesia.

Dr. Poling Doubts if Robins Is in Chicago

Chicago, Sept. 13 (AP)—Doubt that Col. Raymond Robins had been seen in Chicago since his disappearance was expressed today by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, head of the allied forces for prohibition, who came here to aid in the search for the missing prohibitionist and friend of President Hoover.

15 Injured as Bus Leaps Road, Burns

Gary, Ind., Sept. 13 (INS)—Fifteen persons today were recovering from injuries received when a Chicago-Detroit bus plunged off a highway near here and burst into flames.

The accident occurred when the driver, speeding through a heavy rain, swerved to avoid a stalled motorist. Thirty-five persons were on the bus.

MISSING PASTOR FOUND DEAD

The body of Rev. Elbert W. Whitney, 82, retired Unitarian minister of Allston, who had been the object of a statewide search since his disappearance on June 23, was found today in the woods near his summer cottage on Silver lake, Chesham, N. H.

An autopsy was ordered. Cause of death was not immediately apparent. He had been in feeble health.

Rev. Mr. Whitney went to his summer home with his son, Rev. Arthur B. Whitney of Quincy, and his grandson, Rev. H. Blair Whitney of Medfield. The latter two went to Keene on June 23 and, returning, found no trace of the minister.

He also leaves a widow. He became widely known during the 18 years he served as pastor of the Milford Universalist Church.

BLONDE GETS RICHES LEFT BY DU BOIS' MISSING WIFE

While police dragged Great Herring Pond at Plymouth today for the body of Mrs. Edith DuBois, wife of a wealthy jeweler, to provide the corpus delicti and prove a murder was committed, the Boston Evening American learned, despite secrecy of officials, that the mysterious blonde "Grace," fiancee of the missing woman's husband, had been found and questioned.

Other developments were:

1—Friends assert that several months ago Edith DuBois made a will leaving all her property and jewelry to Charles DuBois, her husband, while he made a will leaving his property to her.

2—Boston Evening American finds record at Dedham registry showing two Braintree lots transferred by Edith DuBois to "Grace DuBois of New York" on August 15, five days after Mrs. DuBois vanished.

3—Discovery that the mysterious "Grace," identified by State detectives as the daughter of a wealthy family living near Middleboro, told them she was informed by DuBois that his wife died in an auto accident near Montreal, as he had also told police.

4—"Grace" also tells of trip to Tuckahoe, N. Y., for four days, with DuBois over the past week end, just prior to his arrest on suspicion, which was followed by his release late yesterday because a murder could not be proved without the body.

5—Announcement that the torso of a woman found near Tuckahoe, N. Y., and compared with measurements of Mrs. DuBois, probably is not that of the missing wife.

6—Search started for jewelry of Mrs. DuBois, estimated as worth between $25,000 and $40,000, which may be in safe deposit vaults in Quincy banks.

7—Disclosure that Edith DuBois knew of her husband's affair with "Grace," and realization that Mrs. DuBois' automobile was transferred to this girl, under the name of "Grace DuBois," only last week.

"GRACE" GETS RICHES

Transfer of property of Edith DuBois to "Grace DuBois of New York" loomed as one of the most important angles of investigation today, outside of the search for the body.

The registry of deeds at Dedham shows the transfer of a piece of property in Arnold st., Braintree, and another lot and house in Middle st., Braintree, to "Grace DuBois of New York."

Asst. Dist. Atty. John Sullivan said that DuBois claims the Grace DuBois of this record is a relative, but added that the authorities are convinced it is the mysterious blonde girl, who has been seen with DuBois, since his wife died, in New York, at Plymouth and at Braintree.

As revealed by the Boston Evening American exclusively yesterday, she left a love note for DuBois in his Plymouth cottage, near Great Herring Pond, expressing her happiness that all obstacles to their contemplated marriage had been removed.

HER WILL REVEALED

Neighbors of the DuBois couple disclosed today that the husband had planned to establish a business in Miami, Fla., as representative of a New York jewelry concern, and it is believed the blonde might also have planned to go there.

Mrs. DuBois had a large quantity of jewelry picked up at bargain prices by her husband because of his business connections.

This jewelry, together with her real estate, she left him in the will a few months ago, according to friends of the couple, while he in his turn he left all his property to her.

Although DuBois claims his wife died in an auto accident, and her body was cremated in Canada, nothing has yet been done, at least in this state, about probating a will.

It was learned that Mrs. DuBois returned to Massachusetts from the Tuckahoe, N. Y., home which the couple had established because, it is alleged, of her discovery of his affair with "Grace."

TELLS OF MALADY

Another important angle under investigation is the condition of the missing woman's health in the few months prior to her disappearance.

DuBois told police during long hours of grilling at Plymouth Sunday night and Monday that his wife had a cancer, which was incurable.

Her friends said today that the husband had told them this and he added that he had found morphine which she had evidently taken for pain.

They added, however, that she had been to three doctors, including a Boston and a New York specialist, and had informed them that no evidence of cancer was found by the doctors. She complained of pains frequently.

Six state troopers, accompanied by State Detective Brouillard, Police Chief Dearborn of Plymouth, and a corps of Plymouth policemen, started the dragging of Great Herring Pond today.

DYNAMITE FOR BODY

If this fails, the pond and others in the vicinity will be dynamited after which, in event of continued failure to find the body, which is necessary to prove that a murder was committed, the search will spread to other parts of Cape Cod.

Have You Seen This Woman?

Here is a description of the mysteriously vanished Mrs. Edith DuBois as given to the Boston Evening American today with a request that it be broadcast:

Age, 38.
Height, 5 feet, 6 inches.
Weight, between 110 and 115 pounds.
Hair, dark brown, almost black.
Eyes, dark brown and flashing.
Wore a 6A and 6AA shoes.
Olive complexion.
Eyebrows plucked to a fine line.
Fingers, long and slender and nails always well-manicured.
Nose and mouth, rather large.

to Braintree, Boston and New York.

The identity of the girl, an attractive blonde, who was found by State Detectives Fleming and Brouillard, is being kept secret because of the social prominence of her family.

The Boston Evening American learned exclusively that she lives in a small town near Middleboro, where she was left by DuBois only half an hour before he was detained by police on suspicion.

The Boston Evening American learned that the girl, when found admitted, as did DuBois himself, that she spent four days last week at his home in Tuckahoe, N. Y.

And while they were there, she admitted, the jeweler changed the registration of his wife's sporty roadster to the name of the girl—who is still referred to only as "Grace" by the authorities.

GRILLED BY POLICE

The girl was found after more than 12 hours of searching by the police. She nearly collapsed when the officers visited her home and informed her of their mission.

The Evening American learned "Grace" told police that DuBois had informed her his wife was killed in an accident in Canada two weeks ago, and that she, "Grace," had contemplated a secret wedding with him within a month.

She admitted to police that the note signed "Your Darling Grace DuBois" had been written by her at the DuBois cottage, at Great Herring Pond, while DuBois was gathering firewood.

The girl said DuBois had told her that his wife had gone to Canada with a mysterious Dr. and Mrs. Butler and that all three were killed in an automobile accident. This was the same story that DuBois told to at least seven other persons, including another mysterious woman known to the police as "Sefrina" of Millinocket, Me.

BILL HEINLEIN
HIS SUSPICIONS led to the investigation into the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. Edith DuBois at Plymouth and resulted in husband being grilled on possibility of murder.

GIRL'S FATHER WEALTHY

The police found a letter of condolence from "Sefrina" in DuBois' pocket along with his love messages from "Grace," when he was taken into custody.

Police said today that the name of "Grace" would be withheld because of the wishes of her father, whom they described as one of the wealthiest business men on Cape Cod.

From an unimpeachable source the Evening American learned today that in addition to the hunt for Mrs. DuBois' body the police are also searching the vaults of Quincy banks for $40,000 worth of jewelry that Mrs. DuBois was known to have had as late as three days before she vanished.

The jewelry, mostly diamonds, was brought to the attention of police by a member of DuBois' own family, who told police, "There is something fishy in this case."

The Evening American has learned that the jewels were placed in a safety deposit box in a Quincy bank.

When the investigation was resumed today, State troopers were assigned to drag Great Herring Pond, more were ordered to search the woodlands, and others, armed with shovels and pick axes, dug beneath the newly installed cellar in the DuBois cottage in a search for a body.

Police stated that they would decide later whether the new cement flooring in the garage in Braintree would be ripped out.

WARRANT REFUSED

DuBois was released from custody yesterday when Judge Elmer Briggs refused a warrant because the police had been unable to establish a corpus delicti.

Police stated when they released DuBois that they would be able to locate him whenever they wanted him. It was learned that if he makes any attempt to leave the jurisdiction of the state he would be taken into custody for further questioning.

Despite his alleged statements to friends that Mr. DuBois had gone to Canada and that the trip started from the summer cottage here, DuBois told the police during his long grilling that his friends had misunderstood his story. Instead he said he had driven his wife to the Sagamore depot on the morning of Aug. 10 and that he had placed her aboard a train for Boston, where she was to meet the Butlers at Summer and Washington sts.

He told authorities that he later drove to Boston and met his wife at Summer and Washington sts., and he took her into a department store and spent more than $150 for clothes that she needed for the trip.

He said that he gave his wife $200 for her expenses and spending money on the trip. He remarked that his wife "looked beautiful in her new clothes." He said he could not go on the trip because he could not afford it.

When DuBois was asked if his wife knew of his love for "Grace," he told them that the mystery woman was a friend of his wife. He said that his wife had no idea he contemplated marrying the pretty blonde, who is only 26, but stated that his wife knew that he had been keeping company with several girls.

He told the authorities, the Evening American learned:

"There was no love existing between myself and my wife. Our love cooled a year ago. She knew Grace, but she did not know I had intended to marry her. She knew I had several girl friends.

"I had discussed with my wife the possibility of her going to Paris, so that I could go to Reno and procure a divorce. I wanted to get the divorce so that I could marry Grace.

"However, I want you to understand that I have always had the utmost respect for my wife."

BOSTON RENDEZVOUS

He said that he had married his wife in New York, where they met 17 years ago.

Discussing his affairs with "Grace," DuBois, it was learned, said that his usual meeting place with her was at a Boston hotel. He said that their romance was a secret, and that the girl's parents were unaware that they had been keeping company.

He said he and Grace danced almost every night at Buzzards Bay.

He said that the police had taken him into custody just one-half hour after he left Grace, following their trip from Tuckahoe, N. Y., on which they were accompanied by DuBois' private chauffeur.

He said that Grace had written the love note addressed "Darling," and continuing:

"I am writing you this love note while you are working on there in the yard. I want you to know that you are the only one, and that I always want you.

"OBSTACLES REMOVED"

"I am so happy to think that all the obstacles have been removed that had prevented us from being together and that now nothing on this earth can interfere with our happiness." The note was signed, "Your Darling Grace DuBois."

Police officials early today learned that Mrs. DuBois had been insured for $500. They said that they would make an effort to learn whether any effort had ever been made to collect on the policy, or whether Mrs. DuBois had sought to enlarge this policy or procure a new one recently.

Officials also announced that they had learned that DuBois was in debt, and that several demands had been made recently upon him to pay $2000, which he is alleged to have owed.

They were inclined to discount the possibility that a cloth at first believed to have been blood soaked, had any connection with the case. An examination of the cloth, according to the police, has satisfied them that it had been used by a painter recently employed to paint the outside of the cottage.

Newspaper Stories of DuBois Death Are Checked Up

Lieut. Michael Fleming of the state detectives arrived in Braintree today and began investigation into newspaper stories of Mrs. Edith DuBois' death near Montreal, published in the Quincy News, a daily, on August 20, and in the Braintree Observer, a weekly, on August 26. Both accounts were practically alike, the one in the observer reading:

"Mrs. M. L. DuBois of 35 Middle st., Braintree, was fatally injured Aug. 16 in an automobile accident near Montreal.

"The machine went over an embankment and two others who were riding with her were killed instantly. Mrs. DuBois lived 18 hours before death ended her suffering. The body was taken to Montreal for cremation.

"She is survived by her husband, Charles DuBois."

Lieut. Fleming would not disclose the origin of the story as given to him by the newspapers.

Harrison Bailey, publisher of the Braintree Citizen, another weekly, said he read the item about the death in the Quincy News, but when he attempted to check the story by calling friends of Mrs. DuBois, they said they knew nothing about it.

Bailey said he did not use the story in his paper because he heard the Braintree correspondent who gave it to the News had been sent to Psychopathic Hospital for observation. He is now in Taunton State Hospital, according to the publisher.

MAINE DEMOCRATS ELECT LOUIS J. BRANN GOVERNOR AND 2 CONGRESSMEN

second district was admittedly aided by the candidacy of Fredrick P. Bonney, anti-prohibitionist, who ran as an independent Republican. He polled more than 1600 votes.

The Democrats turned out the largest vote they had ever recorded while the number of Republican ballots fell far below the number cast in 1920, 1924 and 1928—the last three presidential years.

The vote for governor as compared with the last two elections was:

1932	1930	1928
Republican 116,890	82,310	148,038
Democratic 117,360	87,173	85-572

The Democrats administered smashing defeats to the G. O. P. in at least five of the 16 counties, capturing county offices they have rarely held in the last 70 years. They have greatly reduced the Republican majorities in both branches of the Maine legislature.

BRANN WARY OF FRAUD

Fearing election frauds, Judge Brann declined to claim his election positively as governor.

He dispatched personal agents to Wiscasset to investigate conditions there and delay in reporting its vote.

"Wiscasset," said Judge Brann, "is one of the towns that made application for an unusual number of absent-voter ballots. We are determined to ascertain whether those ballots were used to the extraordinary number in which they were applied for by the election officials and whether they were used honestly or fraudulently."

Judge Brann was still scrutinizing the returns that had come to him in a night of vigil without sleep or rest.

SANFORD FOR BRANN

However, the Portland Press-Herald, supporter of the Republican administration, conceded the election of Judge Brann, in a special election edition issued at 10:20 a. m. today.

The same paper conceded the election of Moran and Utterback, Democrats, to Congress, over the Republican stalwarts, Nelson and Brewster.

Governor-elect Brann is bound to receive a boost of between 400 and 600 in his lead from the town of Sanford, which would not report until sometime today.

The town clerk said it was "between 300 and 400," while Brann's headquarters said they were advised it was "better than 600."

The remaining towns unreported were of small voting strength except Gorham in Cumberland county and even a record vote in those places would not muster enough votes to overhaul the Democrats.

Although Brann carried only six of the 16 counties, a majority of 6961 in Androscoggin, where Lewiston is located, put him to the front and offset all of the small Martin majorities in the other 10 counties.

Brann, several years ago, was five times mayor of Lewiston, always a Democratic stronghold.

Brann also broke through Martin's home city, Augusta, by a narrow margin and carried the county of Kennebec by more than 1000.

He won in 14 out of 20 cities, losing only in Calais, Eastport, Ellsworth, Portland, Rockland and South Portland.

SERIOUS BLOW TO G. O. P.

Auburn, just across the river from Lewiston, and usually Republican, went for him, while Biddeford gave him a majority of 2600.

The Democrats—with more of an organization than they ever had before—brought out a larger vote than the party had ever polled previously.

They broke into the State Senate for the first time in years and numerous Republican standbys in the lower House fell by the wayside.

State Senators Harold E. Weeks of Somerset and Allen M. Small of Waldo, Republican leaders, fell along the way, and scattered reports for the House showed that the Democrats would have a much larger majority at least than they have had in the past.

Guy P. Gannett, the newspaper publisher and astute observer, who was for several years the Republican national committeeman of Maine, said:

RECORD VOTE POLLED

"Washington and the National Republican organization can derive no consolation from the results in Maine."

John Clary of Bath, a Democrat, has been elected county attorney of Sagadahoc County, and in Aroostook, Androscoggin and Kennebec Counties, the Democrats have won county posts which they have rarely gained since the Civil War. The Republican majorities in both branches of the Legislature have been materially reduced.

Under the impulse of good weather, of a bitter and seven-typical campaign which found the Republicans on the defensive for the first time in a generation, and probably under the impulse of a general spirit of protest against economic conditions, a greater vote was polled than the extraordinary landslide under which Alfred E. Smith was buried in this commonwealth four years ago.

That this is an extraordinary political revolution may be seen from the fact that the Republican nominee for President won by 40,000 in the presidential year of 1920, by 26,825 in 1924 and by the unprecedented majority of 82,485 in the year of Hoover versus Smith.

All the Republican candidates had dry records in a state which claims the fame of being the mother of prohibition. All the Democratic nominees are for repeal, as was the candidate for governor, who voted against ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment when he was a member of the Maine Legislature.

WILSON CARRIED MAINE

Maine divides its elections on the theory that State and national politics should be kept distinctly separate.

Only once since the termination of the war between the states has Maine cast its presidential electoral vote for a Democrat. That was in 1912.

Woodrow Wilson obtained a plurality over Taft and Roosevelt, although the combined popular vote was against him. A Republican Governor was elected by 4200 two months earlier.

Only twice have the Democrats been able to put a man in the State House at Augusta. In 1910 they won by 8700. In 1914, with the Progressive getting more than 18,000 votes, the Democrats slid in with a plurality of a little over 5100.

If past performances can be regarded as a guide, it is significant that the largest plurality a Republican candidate ever ran up in a year when a Democrat was elected president was approximately 14,000.

That was in 1916, on the eve of America's entry in the World War, when Wilson successfully ran against Charles Evans Hughes.

Maine voted for Hughes but failed to show the way to the rest of the country, and a belated tally of California's vote returned the war President a close winner.

STARS OF CAMPAIGN

In advance of yesterday's trek to the polls, Republican headquarters had been quite nonchalant in their predictions of victory. Nevertheless, they sent some of their heaviest artillery, including Secretary of the Treasury Odgen Mills and Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister of the Vice-President, into the state in an effort to influence the trend of the local election.

Democrats dispatched an array of their leading orators into the same territory. These included Gov. Ely, of Massachusetts, who nominated Alfred E. Smith in Chicago, Senator David I. Walsh, of Mass., who led the winning convention fight for a repeal and modification platform. Others who campaigned here for the Democratic ticket were Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, Mayor John J. Murphy of Somerville, James Roosevelt, son of the Democratic presidential nominee, former Gov. Nellie Taylor Ross of Wyoming, former U. S. Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, and Gene Tunney, who drew unprecedented crowds to rallies that he addressed.

Rockland, Me., Sept. 13 (AP)—Edward C. Moran, Jr., Democrat, who defeated Congressman John E. Nelson, today interpreted his election as demonstrating "an unmistakable trend that Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt will be elected president in November."

DEMOCRATS WHO WRECKED MAINE G. O. P.

EDWARD C. MORAN, JR.
Twice defeated as the Democratic candidate for governor, Edward C. Moran, Jr., was elected congressman in the second district in yesterday's Maine State election, staging a spectacular anti-dry campaign that relegated Cong. John F. Nelson, ardent dry, to ranks of Republican has-beens.

LOUIS J. BRANN
First Democrat elected governor of Maine and first of his party to win that seat in a presidential year since the Civil War. Louis J. Brann of Lewiston led the drive that wrecked the G. O. P. of the Pine Tree State and led it on an out-and-out anti-prohibition platform.

JOHN G. UTTERBACK
Elected by more than 2500 plurality over former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster in the Third Maine Congressional District, John G. Utterback, like his colleague, Edward C. Moran, campaigned on an anti-dry platform. The welDemocratic gain was a stunning blow to G. O. P. hopes.

"As Goes Maine, So Goes the Nation!"

MOSES ADMITS HE HAS A HARD FIGHT AHEAD

Concord, N. H., Sept. 13—The implications of the Maine election cannot be overlooked by any thoughtful Republican, nor can they be explained away by the customary form of political alibi, said U. S. Senator George H. Moses, Republican bulwark, today.

Senator Moses led the Republican precinct activities in the Pine Tree State and emerged from the shambles of the Maine bullmoose this morning to participate in today's primaries here.

"There were some local crosscurrents in the Maine election which were readily discernible to those o fus from the outside who were campaigning there," he said.

"The answer to that is that we (Republicans) should organize and develop enthusiasm. This is not the first time Maine elected a Democratic governor in a presidential year while the Republicans elected a president. Therefore, the policy for Republicans henceforth is to remember 1930 and repeat the job.

"That was a long time ago," someone suggested.

"Yes," he admitted, "and the wounn were not voting then."

"Do you plan to stay in New Hampshire now and build your own fences?" he was asked.

"Do you think any Republican candidate can afford to neglect his own state now in view of what just happened in Maine?" the Senate countered.

'Moss-Backs' Go Democratic for First Time Since Civil War

Portland, Me., Sept. 13—Republican leaders were astounded and grievously wounded yesterday by the surprising shift of sentiment quite common to the rural communities. Some of the "moss-backed Republican" precincts registered a Democratic majority for the first time in a presidential year since Lincoln won them on the slavery issue.

Maine Refuses to Raise Gas Tax

Portland, Sept. 13—The people of Maine were asked on the ballot to increase the gas tax from four to five cents. They said "no" by a majority of ten to one.

BRANN BROKE TWO RECORDS

Portland, Me., Sept. 13—Judge Louis Brann, first Democrat elected governor of Maine in 18 years and first elected in a presidential year since the Civil War, is slightly more than 50 years old, is married, a Christian Scientist, a prize fight fan and has held about every office within the gift of his fellow citizens of Lewiston.

Judge Brann was elected to the legislature 14 years ago and distinguished himself as one of the 14 members of the House who voted against ratification of national prohibition. He was then convinced and is today that national prohibition is unenforceable and an unforgivable violation of state's rights.

He was elected mayor of his home city five times and he also served as judge of the municipal court for one five-year-term. He was once chairman of the Democratic state committee.

He promised, if elected Governor:

1—To purify the election laws where they permit of fraud or corruption.

2—To eliminate the 101-year-old statute under which several hundred citizens of Maine have been thrown from the voting list and branded as paupers because they accepted public charity in these hard times.

3—To strive for a law to insure savings deposits in banks against loss.

4—That no State contracts for highway construction will be signed by him unless they contain provisions guaranteeing the employment of Maine citizens and a minimum living wage.

5—That long stretches of highway repairs shall not be undertaken in the summer months on the avenues to the famous summer resorts.

6—A reduction in the salaries of high-paid State officials in order that economy and tax reduction may be enforced.

7—New teeth for blue sky laws in order to protect the people of Maine from worthless speculative stocks.

F. D. SMILES AT MAINE VICTORY

Cleveland, Sept. 13 (AP)—Governor Roosevelt and his presidential campaign party arrived here on their special train from Albany, N. Y., this morning.

The Democratic nominee did not leave the dining car, but his son James appeared on the rear platform and spoke a greeting to the crowd. He was asked if the nomination had any comment on the strong Democratic showing in the Maine election.

The candidate's son relayed the question to his father, and then reappeared, saying the nominee's only comment was "a broad smile."

Roosevelt was quoted as saying that "New England is all right," and that "Al Smith is all right and is a good Democrat."

At 8:30 a. m. the train started for St. Louis.

Light Vote in New Hampshire and Vermont

Concord, N. H., Sept. 13 (INS)—Listless primaries were being held in New Hampshire today.

United States Senator George H. Moses (R) did practically no campaigning, being opposed by Joseph L. Richards, whose name does not appear on the ballot but who asked his friends to write it in.

Fred H. Brown, veteran Democratic campaigner, was favored to win over Joseph Contremarch, of Lebanon, and Timothy F. O'Connor for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Ely Is Delighted, Not Surprised

"I am delighted, but not surprised," was the comment of Gov. Ely today on the success of the Democrats in Maine.

Ely sent telegrams of congratulation to Governor-elect Louis J. Brann and to John Utterback and Edward C. Moran, Jr., successful aspirants to Congress.

"If anyone can, you can," the reporter suggested.

"Listen, young man," said Senator Moses, "I regard this coming election battle for my own seat as the hardest I have faced in 15 years. Some of my well-meaning friends say I'll win by a large majority, but I'm telling you that if I win at all, I shall be well satisfied."

Aroostook County Goes Democratic

Portland, Me., Sept. 13—The Aroostook County district, where potatoes are selling for 15 cents a barrel against the normal price of $1.50 and where 4000 potato growers have been cited for non-payment of taxes, went Democratic yesterday, one of the few times in its history. The textile centers, where business has been resumed after a long lapse but with 50 per cent cuts, went Democratic, and in all of the industrial communities there were astonishing Democratic gains.

NOT BEING AFRAID GOOD BASE FOR PATRIOTISM

By GILBERT SELDES

I was maliciously pleased to find a trace of childlike (and perfectly natural) patriotism in the Geography written by Hendrik Willem Van Loon, because Van Loon is by circumstances and by philosophy a genuine internationalist and, being a historian, knows what fateful forms an unintelligent patriotism can take to ruin the world. Yet there is a special warmth in the sentences he devotes to his native land: "Any wheezy old flivver will carry you from one end of Holland to the other in a few hours. And yet, next to the territory of Attica, this narrow strip of land . . . has probably contributed more to the sum total of our arts and sciences than any other region of similar diminutive proportions." And when he calls Great Britain "an island off the Dutch coast" he is a little boy again, happy among his dykes and Zees and windmills.

GILBERT SELDES

It has generally been considered good for a man to care deeply for the land in which he was born, and there have been philosophers who considered a little dislike of all other lands perfectly natural. So I do not hold Mr. Van Loon's patriotism against him; his is a pleasant land (to judge only by an aeroplane view) and gave us Rembrandt and Ver Meer as well as the founders of New York.

Love at First Sight

I made, last Summer, a discovery about patriotism which placed it in a new light for me. I had gone to Sweden, left it, and returned. On my trip I was going to a new country, feeling the uncertainty of an explorer, wondering about the language and customs, wondering even more whether Sweden would have for me the quality it had had for many people—of instantly charming me into a sort of affection. A village and a continent are capable of making such instant impressions, and they have their importance even if they aren't reasonable. Although I arrived in Gothenberg in a slashing rain, my first impression was friendly; people were nice, the hotel was good, the food well-cooked, the general aspect of life attractive. When I had to leave, I liked Sweden enormously.

So much so that I determined to return, and it was on returning that I made my discovery. I liked Sweden more on the way back than I had when I was leaving it behind. Why? Nothing had happened to enhance its charms; yet my feeling was distinctly warmer. What had happened must have happened to me.

It had. I now felt familiar with the country. I knew where the railway station would be in Malmo and how the sleeping cars would look and where my room would face the palace in Stockholm and what I would have to say and do to make my wants known. This familiarity—this sense of being at home—made me, in effect, a patriot. My second visit to Sweden was far more attractive than the first, chiefly because I fell into perfect weather instead of rain; and I would like to go there again, because now I should be relishing not a new dish, but one whose virtues I know by heart.

Platoon-Patriotism

It occurred to me then that our small patriotisms are all built on this sense of being at home. The patriotism of a company—even of a platoon—during the war, rose from the sense of being with friends; since we all have a primal fear of strangers, this counted for much. To stand next to the same man at every formation was reassuring, and men training in divisions were always prouder than men in replacement units, because divisions were going over en masse, while replacements were scattered. The pride of collegiate youths is another instance, and pride in local baseball teams rises from the same source. What we know, we do not fear; and since we are all timid, what we do not fear, we love. Later we find better-sounding reasons for our devotion.

The instant liking of which I spoke above came to me in Finland. The air journey from Stockholm to Helsingfors is a grand experience, for in a few hours, you fly over the Baltic and, covering a distance which it takes a boat a day and night to pass, you are never actually out of sight of some spot of earth. The Swedish archipelago follows you nearly half way and as soon as it ends, the Finnish isles begin until you land at Abo. Then, turning the tables, you fly over land, but are hardly ever out of sight of water, for Finland is all lake and forest.

Beauty and Silence

Helsingfors (which the natives call Helsinki) is notable for architecture and silence. The reddish granite which the Finns can dig from the middle of the streets has been beautifully used by the architect Siren in the Diet building and Saarinen, who has worked in America, has designed one of the best railway stations in the world. Architectural beauties are, however, occasional; except for Venice, is there any city in which an entire street is well-built?

The silence of Helsingfors is universal and is due to one local law, motorists are forbidden to blow their horns. They approach crossings so slowly as to see their opponents coming; they bow and go on. "They're allowed to blow," said my guide, "only if it's a choice between the horn and the hospital." And it doesn't often come to that.

U. S. TRIES TO DISHONOR HEROES OF '17, SAYS ELSIE ROBINSON

that came into it, saw how that food was obtained.

Every pound of that food was donated by the friends of the Bonus Expeditionary Force who sent either money or trucks filled with provisions. It was not obtained by panhandling. Nor was it obtained from the Red Cross.

Toward the end, some cracked wheat was obtained from the Farm Board's reserve supply and given through the Red Cross. No other food save that was given or obtained.

Politicians Who Wouldn't Face Them Can Now Insult Them

Forgers.

Panhandlers.

Even these charges are not enough. The job must be complete—there must be left no shred of decency whereby these poor souls may defend their name.

And so they are accused of every imaginable outrage, even to the act of molesting Washington women.

What would have happened to any American attorney general or American President who had dared place such a charge against the honor of American fighting men during the war?

But these are no longer fighting men. These are homeless, hungry creatures—pitiful victims of our economic mismanagement—too weak, too desperate to defend themselves.

And so the well-fed politicians who would not face them in Washington, would not speak to them, would not visit their camp, would not even allow them to parade past the White House, can now—without fear—insult them as they will!

For all the weeks they were in Washington, I, an American woman, passed among those men—saw hundreds of other women mingling with them. And never once did I see an act of discourtesy to womanhood. Never once did I witness violence nor even vulgarity. Nor does the police blotter of Washington record any such lawlessness.

On the contrary there was ceaseless vigilance to prevent disorder on the part of the B. E. F. leaders, both before and after the adjournment of Congress. And there was constant cooperation with that splendid ex-soldier and police chief, Brig.-Gen. Pelham D. Glassford.

The charges that these men were largely criminals is as great an affront to Gen. Glassford as to the character of the men themselves. He investigated their records. He supervised their activities while in Washington. He stood by them as their friend and former comrade. If these men are dishonored, he is dishonored with them, and the citizens of America share that dishonor if they permit this charge to stand.

But Mitchell says there were Communists there!

Yes, out of an estimated 7000 to 15,000 men, there were shown to be 300 Communists. But those Communists had fought to save this country.

A man cannot be arrested merely because he is a Communist.

"But even granted all this, they had no right to be there," you may say. "It wasn't the regular way to go about things."

That's a fair statement and, in part, a true one. It wasn't the regular way to go about things. But these aren't regular times. No one is going about things in a regular way.

80 Millions for One Bank Not 80 Cents for Starving

If bankers and railroad presidents may openly lobby from Washington's beautiful hotels, why may not the men who saved America lobby from Washington's mud flats?

If it isn't a crime for a bank or a railroad to ask for emergency aid, why is it a crime for an ex-soldier to do so?

Eighty millions of dollars given without hesitation to save one bank in Chicago, but not even eighty cents given to ease the pains of thousands of starving veterans, 250 women and 350 children!

And even if these men didn't rate a bonus, didn't they at least rate a friendly hand? Didn't those scars rate respect, didn't those wounds rate pity? Didn't those blasted lives rate our gratitude?

They had to be sent home? Maybe. But could they not have been sent home with a little of that consideration with which they were sent away from home? Could not at least one of those great men who are building their careers on the government those men saved, have gone down to Anacostia Field to show them honor and wish them God-speed?

No one went.

Smugly satisfied, the administration watched that pitiful rout. Smugly satisfied, one government official after another has risen to justify that shameful day.

And this week the whole administration unites in an attack on the honor of American ex-soldiers which is unparalleled in heartlessness and arrogance and deliberate misinformation.

Are you going to join in that attack?

The men who defended us yesterday are up against the wall today, helpless to defend themselves. No longer useful to their government, they and their honor are about to be blotted out.

WE SHOUTED FOR THOSE MEN IN 1917.

WE SOBBED OVER THEM IN 1918.

SHALL WE SPIT AT THEM TODAY?

NAME KREUGER AS CRIMINAL IN VAST FRAUDS

Stockholm, Sept. 13 (AP)—Ivar Kreuger, Swedish match king, who committed suicide in Paris last spring, was not a man of business, but a criminal, is the opinion expressed in the preliminary report of the administrators of the Kreuger & Toll bankruptcy proceedings, published in the newspaper Dagens Nyheter today.

Analyzing what they called Kreuger's gigantic frauds, the administrators said that from the time when he became able to maintain the pretense, he started "to bluff" with reports of vast, but fictitious profits, in an effort to maintain the impression he was a great financial genius.

It is not as a business man, the report said, but as a criminal that he was distinguished from ordinary people.

The report also accuses the directors of Kreuger & Toll who, it said, appeared frequently to have had a knowledge of the falsity of Kreuger's reports regarding the firm's position.

Inventor Tells Truth About Lie Detector

Chicago, Sept. 13 (AP)—The inventor of the lie detector came out today with what he says is the truth about his invention, which has been widely used to tell whether persons are fibbing.

The machine, invented by Dr. John A. Larson, assistant state criminologist, won't tell a lie, Larson said, but he would not send a man to jail solely on its evidence, because the human interpretation of its records may be faulty. There is a constant percentage of such error, ranging from 5 to 25 per cent, he said.

Phone Official's Case Is Again Postponed

Fall River, Sept. 13—For the second time since his arrest on drunken driving charges, a continuance was granted in district court today to Edward E. Mellen of Tiverton, R. I., telephone company business manager.

Mellen was arrested August 26 by troopers of the Freetown barracks, shortly after he left a New Bedford golf club. The new continuance was granted until October 21.

examine the Bonus Army registration records.

4—Demands by several U. S. Senators for a thorough probe of the attorney general's report.

5—District of Columbia commissioners assert positively that Gen. Glassford told them the situation was beyond control of the police and that troops were necessary.

Gen. Glassford flatly denied the assertion that he thought troops were needed.

"I stated that the police could hold the area which had been repossessed during the morning," his statement said. "I stated that if further efforts toward evicting the veterans by the police was insisted upon that afternoon, there doubtless would be more rioting and possible bloodshed.

LETTER MADE PUBLIC

"I recommended that if further evicting be required that day, the federal troops should be called upon to do it."

Soon after Glassford issued his statement, the Justice Department made public the copy of a letter received fro mthe board of commissioners on Aug. 2. It stated that Glassford had conferred with the commissioners soon after the first clash with veterans and said:

"The former (Glassford) was asked by the commissioners if the situation was out of his control, to which he replied in the affirmative . . . Major Glassford further stated in substance that the police could no longer hold the bonus marchers in check.

"He was then asked a direct question whether he thought it necessary to secure the assistance of federal troops, to which he replied he did."

BEYOND CONTROL, THEY SAY

The commissioners' reply to Glassford said:

"The commissioners assert positively that Gen. Glassford stated to them the situation in the affected area was beyond the control of the police; that in response to a direct question as to vinced that the presence of troops was necessary Gen. Glassford stated positively that the presence of troops was necessary.

"Two of the commissioners then visited the scene of the disturbance and likewise were convinced that the presence of troops was necessary if law and order were to be restored and preserved. They thereupon asked that troops be sent to the affected area.

"The commissioners believe that the presence of troops alone prevented more serious bloodshed and far greater disorder."

Glassford's statement also took authorities to task for not advising him when the troops were called.

CRIME DECREASED

"The information came to me first from a newspaper reporter... I was in command at the scene of a difficult situation which was vitally affected by the call for Federal troops. I have never been informed why the commissioners did not notify me instantly when the troops were called."

Police records today disclosed that crime decreased in the capital during the occupancy of the B. E. F.

During May, June and July—embracing the bonus army's invasion from May 26 to July 28—there were 394 less offenses committed than during the same three months last year.

Sharp increase in the number of crimes was reported during August, after the bonus army had been evicted from the capital.

During the three months of May, June and July the total number of offenses listed by the police, including murder, manslaughter, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny and auto theft, totaled 3533 and during the same period in 1931 the total was 3139.

MORE IN AUGUST

During July, the critical period of the bonus invasion, the number of offenses was 1073 while in August the number rose to 7152. In April, before the bonus army came, the number of offenses was 940. In May the total was 1066, in June 1060 and in July 1073.

Officials of the Bonus Army maintain they co-operated with Police Chief Glassford in maintaining order. A "military police" was created in the Bonus Army over the protest of the Communists. This organization was charged with the same duties given military police during the World War.

Officials of the bonus marchers also flatly denied today that government officials had made any attempt to examine B. E. F. registration records.

At the same time, members of Congress served notice the Justice Department "investigation," including President Hoover's action in calling out the federal troops, would be investigated in public hearings when Congress convenes in December.

90 PER CENT COMPLETE

George P. Rady, official registrar of the B. E. F., declared he has not been approached by any justice official or other government officer for access to the registration records. He added that to his knowledge these records never have been examined by the investigators.

The official records, he said, were 90 per cent complete at the time of the evacuation, and an examination would have afforded the probers an accurate list of the men, identifications, and their World War service.

Senator Brookhart (R) of Iowa said he would press for a thorough inquiry into Mitchell's report. Senators McKellar (D) of Tennessee and King (D) of Utah previously had served notice they would demand an investigation of President Hoover's action in calling out the troops.

Red Leader Listed By Mitchell Has No Crime Record

Detroit, Sept. 13 (INS)—John T. Pace, Detroit "left wing" labor leader, and head of a so-called radical group within the Bonus Expeditionary Force, has no crime on record against him here, although Atty.-Gen. Mitchell's report on the bonus army eviction termed him a criminal.

Pace was arrested three times in Lincoln Park after unemployment disorders. He was freed twice, and the third time sentenced to 60 days in jail.

But the circuit court later reversed the conviction and jail sentence.

Bonus Army Women Decent Housewives, Mothers, She Says

Washington, Sept. 13—What sort of women followed men into the mud of Anacostia flats? What sort of women lived among what Atty.-Gen. Mitchell said probably was "the greatest aggregation of criminals ever been assembled in the city at any one time?"

Decent women. Housewives. Mothers. They composed the big majority of women with the bonus army, Lieut. Rhoda Milliken, of the women's bureau of the Washington police, said today. Describing her visits to the B. E. F. camps, Lieut. Milliken declared:

"We went to give them the only service we could, that of soap and water. It was appreciatively received.

"Of all the hundreds of women there, only four were turned over to us. All conducted themselves well.

"In all the time the men were here we received no complaint about any of them annoying girls, or committing an assault."

VETS CALL FOR QUICK BONUS AND REPEAL of the Legion, last night.

Gibbons criticized the methods used in ejecting the B. E. F. He accused the Army of having started the fires which destroyed bonus camps and said the men had been orderly when the troops were called in.

Hurley responded to the challenge with characteristic fire.

"I have never failed to take it on the chin when I had anything coming," he said. "If you have anything to say to me, say it! I never thought the government was in danger. I have always believed the people of the nation have a peaceable way for settlement of their disputes and that they will use those peaceful methods.

"But when there are riots, peace must be restored.

"When men are shooting, when two lives have been taken, when the police and civil authorities of a city and district are overpowered by those rioters, I want to say to you that when any man tells you that is law and order, it is not stating the facts.

VETS BLAMED FOR FIRES

"My friend, Mr. Gibbons, told you that the soldiers set fire to the humble homes of these men. That is not the fact. The fires were set by the men themselves. No member of the army would do that. All the fatalities that occurred on the day of which you have heard so much took place before the arrival of the United States Army."

Hurley spoke earnestly as he read the order he had written at President Hoover's direction.

"Now, can you find any fault with those orders?" he asked. "Are they unjustly harsh? I ordered out the armed forces of the government to protect the marchers as well as others.

"There were men among that group in Washington who came in an orderly way to state their case whom I would lay down my life to protect. There were wonderfully fine men among them. But there were other men there, too. All were not angels. And I want to tell you that this is a government of a majority and not a government of a minority."

CURLEY CHEERED

Delegates cheered a speech by Mayor James M. Curley of Boston who said war time heroes had been "shot down like dogs in the capital of our nation."

Hurley was said by members of the Oklahoma delegation to have accepted the badge of a delegate from that state and in doing so to have promised to vote for immedi-

Mayor of Boston and Guest at the American Legion Convention

(Copyright, 1932, for the Boston Evening American.)

Portland, Ore., Sept. 13—Ah, but there is a lot of sadness at this convention.

I can well realize the sadness that would come to the hearts of the fathers of our country in the knowledge that, notwithstanding the fact that we were the wealthiest nation in the whole world, and had made greater progress along social and economic lines than any other nation in the history of the world, in a shorter period of time, this great and rich country of ours has lost that which Washington and his followers gave to America and sincerely hoped never might be lost—faith, fortitude and courage.

FAITH NEEDED

I would to God for the salvation of our country that that faith might be restored, that that fortitude might be in evidence, that that courage might everywhere be present, that we might walk into the future with head erect, with courage undimmed, prepared to meet our obligations and prepared to overcome any obstacles that might present themselves.

I have an appreciation of how the Father of Our Country's heart would be saddened at the knowledge that more than ten millions of men in America are without opportunity for a livelihood.

HEROES SHOT DOWN

I can appreciate how the heart of the great hero would be saddened and filled with sorrow with the knowledge that some of those victims of our social order who in the hour of crisis stood ready to make the supreme sacrifice that free government might not perish from the earth, because they were victims, because they pleaded for that to which they were entitled, that they were shot down like dogs in the capital of our nation.

But I am not fearful of the future. No man is who is conversant with the history of our country. The old law of compensation never fails; right is always rewarded; wrong always punished.

ate bonus payment.

The secretary was expected to march in today's big parade as a buck private among the Legionnaires from his home state. He had been asked to watch from the reviewing stand, but preferred to march.

Pennsylvania delegates promised to carry their fight to the convention floor, if necessary, for a resolution censuring the President for the manner in which the bonus expeditionary force was ejected.

Portland was given a foretaste of today's event in the 40 and 8 parade last night. The entire business district has been turned over to the Legion, business houses will close and traffic will be routed around it.

Local and federal authorities raided a number of soft drink parlors converted to "dugouts" by the addition of imitation log fronts and real alcohol to the beverages on sale. Several proprietors were arrested.

SIX IN TAUNTON SEEK DIVORCE

Taunton, Sept. 13—Norma L. Bettinson of Taunton is seeking a divorce from Edgar K. Bettinson of Somerville, alleging desertion on August 9, 1926, and neglect to provide. They were married in Taunton, February 12, 1924, and have three children.

Lavinia A. Wyman, Taunton, in her suit against Alfred H. Wyman, Raynham, charges desertion. Their wedding took place in Taunton on May 6, 1919.

Doris Johnson of New Bedford in an action against James Jackson, of the same city, charges cruel and abusive treatment on July 6 of this year. They were married October 28, 1929 in New Bedford.

Irving Soiup of Fall River charges Hazel Soiup of Brooklyn, deserted him on January 1, 1928.

Lillian Reise of Fall River charges John Ernest Reise of Swansea with cruelty, and charges the offense took place on April 23 of this year.

Beulah M. Cole of Attleboro in her suit against Eugene R. Cole of Attleboro alleges cruel and abusive treatment and neglect to provide.

Escaped Medfield Patient Is Hunted

Franklin, Sept. 13 (AP)—The woods were being searched today for a patient of the Medfield State Hospital who escaped Friday. On the recreation he chased two boys and on another he accosted two girls.

Gibbons Lauds Heroic Love for Flag B. E. F. Showed

Portland, Ore., Sept. 13—Floyd Gibbons, famous war correspondent, in his now historic speech defending the bonus army before a meeting of American Legion leaders here, said:

Floyd Gibbons

"I congratulate you, commanders. I envy you. What a spirit of Americanism you put into your men! What a respect for the flag when danger beset our country! You officers taught them discipline and respect for our institutions.

"That was proven in Washington. When Congress turned those veterans down in their plea for adjusted service compensation, they stood in the rain and sang the 'Star Spangled Banner.' That spirit was taught them by men right in this room.

"When, with all forms of provocation used against them, when forces in the same uniforms they were in France came against them, when their homes were burned down, they did not resist. My admiration goes out to the commanders who instilled those principles of law and order in them and to the men who carried those principles into effect."

Wrecked Mystery Plane of Navy Found

San Francisco, Sept. 13 (AP)—Raised from the Pacific ocean by a fishing boat's trawler net, the skeleton of a navy pursuit monoplane presented a problem for naval authorities today.

The wreck was towed into San Francisco Bay. It was thought the ship may have been an experimental plane from one of the aircraft carriers.

NEWS OF THE THEATER By Nicholas Young

Prospects for Season of Grand Opera Appear Encouraging Now

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

The prospects of a season of grand opera in Boston are encouraging, if not exactly conclusive. Mr. Fortune Gallo, maestro of the San Carlo organization, has made overtures to the Shuberts for the temporary possession of the Boston Opera House in the middle autumn. He found receptive ears. Mr. Gallo enjoys a tentative acquiescence to his plans for a revival of severe operatic presentation at popular prices. The notion, however, is largely optional on the parties of both the first and second parts. A late October booking would suit Mr. Gallo; as to the Shuberts, any time, the earlier the better, would meet their requirements.

With the definite withdrawal of the Chicago Civic Opera Company from the local field, there has developed an insistent itching on the part of both the minor and the big leaguers opera to take over Boston's operatic expositions. Besides Mr. Gallo, whose importunities have intrigued the Shuberts, Mr. Milton Aborn has scouted the territory in the interest of his own Civic Opera Company, which specializes in light opera of the better sort. There are indications, too, that New York's management Metropolitan has cast an envious eye upon local possibilities. As matters stand, Mr. Gallo holds the best hand—he can have the Opera House in October if he demands it.

RATTLING THE SKELETON—John McManus, who swings a mean baton over Ed Wynn's orchestra in "The Laugh Parade," was born in Peabody, and while boyishly practicing upon his saxophone, made both ends meet by doubling three afternoons a week, and Saturday night, in a local hardware store.

Double Duty for Star

Daniel Haynes, sonorous Adam of "The Green Pastures," is called upon for double duty today. In the quiet of the afternoon Mr. Haynes is expected to take a stage bow at Lowe's State as a personage of importance in America's drama. His visit to the State is to be echoed by a number of Negro spirituals not included in the regular program. Mr. Haynes, by way of versatility, is an actor of both stage and screen. At this appearance he becomes a dual personality. In the film, "The Last Mile," he is shown as one of the unhappy victims of electrocution on the stage he chants the soulful melodies of his race.

There is no escape for the Fire Chief. Ed Wynn last evening—very late—became the guest of Cambridge Council of the Knights of Columbus. The journey from the Shubert to the city across the Charles was attended by a police escort and fire department cars amply equipped with sirens. There is no rest for the weary—nor for the stage man who wears a smoke eater's helmet.

GASTRONOMICAL NOTE—Richard B. Harrison, artistically famous as the Lord in "The Green Pastures," will be the guest of honor tomorrow at a newspaper men's luncheon at the Brunswick.

Sidetracked Again

"Strange Interlude," that vivid drama of life in the raw which the estimable Mr. John M. Cosey kept out of Boston when expressed in flesh and blood, appears equally unable to expose its charms as a matter film. Originally booked at the Majestic, it has been shunted aside by plays, latterly booked, which can hardly be expected to match it in anything but stirring human virtues. There are, at least, five trunk falls of "Strange Interlude" film at the M-G-M exchange hardly asking for a chance to be seen and heard.

TRUE LOVE HITS SNAG

Melvyn Douglas Replaces Paul Lukas in Cast of Universal's 'Nagana'

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Sept. 13—Melvyn (Garbo's last leading man) Douglas will replace Paul Lukas in "Nagana," the Abyssinian (and I'll be seein' you too) yarn which Ernst Franck is directing for Universal. Story was all set for Lukas and Tala Birell, till Lukas, who's accepted plenty of dud assignments without complaint, refused flatly to do it.

Lowdown on the situation as follows: Lukas hasn't made a picture for U since that studio bought his contract from Paramount. But he's been loaned out three times—for MGM's "Downstairs," Fox's "Passport to Hell" and Radio's "Rockabye"—with Universal netting 16 grand over and above his salary on the deals.

None of the three pictures [Harriet Parsons] has been particularly good for Lukas—through no fault of his own—and he feels that U is using him as a money-making property to his own disadvantage. Studio has met his rebellion with a four weeks' layoff minus salary.

Composer Signed

Remember colored Clarence Muse's fine performance in "Hearts in Dixie," the film which made the elusive Stepin Fetchit temporarily famous? Muse is an interesting character, a versatile chap. He authored the song hit, "Sleepy Time Down South," and turned out a book called "Way Down South." Jesse Weil has just signed Muse to play in a picture based on the book. He'll also compose some numbers for the film and later make personal appearances in connection with it. Practically the entire cast, with the exception of author-actor Muse, is white.

Helene as Star

Helene Madison, who's accustomed to the starter's pistol as a signal for work, is going to have to get used to the cry of "turn 'em over!" instead. Agent Ivan Kahn, who guided Sally O'Neill, Alice White and others to cinema fame, has placed the Olympic games aquatic champ under personal contract. Although several of the major studios put in bids for the young lady Kahn has signed her with Independent Producer John Klein for whom she will make a film financed by a group of Hollywood business men. Picture will not be a college story and won't picture Madison as a swimming champ.

Sylvia Sydney's Next

One of Sylvia Sidney's most outstanding stage successes during her pre-movie days was in Vina Delmar's smash hit, "Bad Girl." Interesting, therefore, that Sylvia will shortly be seen on the screen in another Delmar story. Courtney Terrett is adapting "Pick Up," a magazine story by the best-selling novelist. You'll remember the Radio-Paramount controversy over the title, "Pick Up." Courtney Terrett's yarn under that name last year but had to release it with a different title when Paramount, who owned the Delmar piece, claimed prior rights.

This and That:

Lucky Humberstone, smart megaphoner, whose good work as independent companies brought him a Paramount contract, draws assignment to direct "King of the Jungle," Buddy Rogers' next. Is it that neither George Bancroft, nor Bob (Pizzikin Hero) Hall will have the lead. Have you a little Tarzan in your home? If you have, send him over to Paramount and save the wear and tear on your chandelier. Frank Morgan goes into "Phantom Fame." Radio's picturization of the late publicity genius, Harry Reichenbach's autobiographical novel. Wynne Gibson added to cast of "Metropolitan Garage."

Hollywood Chatter

Sidney Fox has a swell system for handing phone call chiselers who get itching fingers every time they see a dial in somebody else's house. If you use the phone in Sidney's Malibu manse you drop 15 cents (cost of a Malibu-Hollywood call) in a cigar box. Contents go to the M. P. fund. Irwin (Bricktop) Gelsey has just finished directing "Grand Slam," a farce about bridge. Gelsey maintains that only a non-player can keep a sense of humor about America's national indoor sport. The Ken MacKenna whaling party hauled in 60 tons of whale oil in one piece. Caught 70-foot fin-back female and now they don't know what to do with the darn thing.

BUSTER KEATON and LEW CODY starting Malibu with Buster's new land yacht. BUSTER, in full admiral's regalia, gold epaulets and all. The SAM JAFFEES entertaining for ILKA CHASE, here to play in "Animal Kingdom." BILLY HAINES, the PAUL LUKASES, the BILLY (Hollywood Reporter) WILKERSONS among the guests. DAISY LUKAS telling about her forthcoming trip. She leaves for her native Budapest next week, to be gone several months. GARY COOPER drawing plenty of admiring feminine glances (not that that's news) at the Brown Derby. CHARLIE (FUNNYMAN) RUGGLES also dining at the Vine at, hostelry. EDDIE (to Europe or not to Europe that is the question) Robinson easing his troubles with some of Al Levy's kosher corned beef and potato salad. NOEL (MOSCOVITCH) MADISON also enjoying Levy's luncheon specialties. MAE CLARKE telling friends the report of her death was greatly exaggerated. Seems as SUSAN CLARKE tried to commit suicide and MAE got the credit line. SIDNEY SKOLSKY pouting because the Bern case is keeping him from getting back to Manhattan. That's all today.

Cotton Club Show Again Thrills

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The new show put on by the Scollay, started off with a whoop and a wallop, yesterday afternoon. Again, it was a case of standing room only—this reviewer just had to be one of the standees throughout the long program—and again the Negro performers went smash-bang through a snappy bill, often stopped by loud applause.

Though Stepin Fetchit remains, he is passed by a number of others in the run for first honors. Incidentally, it should be explained that the show is the night club's "breakfast edition," as contrasted with its midnight edition presented last week.

Miller and Mantan, a new act, are an eleven they remind you of the best of ye olde minstrels. Their line is novel and laughable; and their blackboard business is one of the choicest bits in many a year. They would be efficient headliners for any vaudeville bill. The plaudits continue long after they have faded from view, and delay the next turn by minutes.

There are three dancing youths, outstanding in speed, deftness, and originality. Their act puts them at the top of their kind. "Snakehips" Tucker again takes many bows, along with Jimmi Price.

Another echo of oldtime minstrelsy comes in the stellar acting of Johnny Hudgins, pantomimist extraordinary. All the other features of Leonard Harper's big show are present and amply accounted for, especially Joyner and Joyner and Williams and Cryor.

The tone of the show is such in its revelation of Negro talents, that the jungle dance smacks the eye and stings the cheek. It may be all right in a night club, but is out of place on this stage.

Otherwise, the "breakfast edition" is appetizing and hearty.

Globe Trotter

The great gathering of European royalty at the ceremony attending the christening of the infant son of the former Princess Ileana of Roumania, is pictured in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. Ex-King Alfonzo of Spain came out of his exile to be Godfather and was the star performer. The infant was born to Ileana and the Archduke Anton of Austria-Tuscany. The christening took place at Moedling, near Vienna. Preceding the christening the royal procession passed the estate of Sigmund Freda of Archduke Anton, led by the baby's parents, Dowager Queen Marie of Roumania, Alfonso, Princess Elizabeth, sister of Ileana, and former Queen of Greece and others. The former King of Spain holds the infant in his arms and shows that he knows how to handle babies.

Two Girls Star in the Dance

Two stars of the dance are featured in the stage show which opened at Howard yesterday. Tangara entertains with her Oriental repertory and Georgia Southern offers the contact of the latest in Occidental dancing. The new burlesque proves to be a peppy aggregation, the "Hard to Go" company. The fun is handled by a couple of experts, Harry Seamon and Billy Haines.

The vaudeville bill is a good one, bringing to the fore Burger's Boxing Girls, the troupe boasting some international champions: Seed and London, comics, and Dolly Kay, singer.

On screen is "Destry Rides Again," with Tom Mix; and Tim McCoy in "During Danger." There will be a midnight show Friday night next.

Unusual Film at Fine Arts

By HARRIS MORGAN

"Isle of Paradise," at the Fine Arts, is an unusual film, of rare motion picture excellence, expertly made and fascinating as the synthetic plot makes the average talkie times. It presents the people of the island of Bali so interestingly that "Isle of Paradise" can be set down as a picture of great distinction, taking its place among the best Fine Arts has ever shown. Considered as having given no sop whatsoever to anything Hollywoodish, it is the best.

The film is the more intriguing because of its genuineness. In every manner the isle and its folk, their habits and rituals, are portrayed. One becomes a part of the changing, colorful scene. The backgrounds extremely beautiful, the women live up to the reputation that travelers have given them for looks. The native celebrations are highlights, smoothly woven into the fabric, which may be said to work out its climax in the festivities of the funeral procession.

He who has a yen for Majorca or further-flung Tahiti will find a rival creeping into his wanderlust, in this charm of Bali. In recent months much has been written about this pearl in the Dutch East Indies, the simplicity and happiness of its people. "Isle of Paradise" makes the whole narrative a vivid and appealing one.

To Charles Trego goes acclaim for the artistic picture he has made. We are informed he spent six months among the natives, his handiwork indicates an honesty and a rich gift in the use of the lens.

Stage Who's Who

Owen Moore

Owen Moore, headlining this week at Loew's Orpheum, has had a long career on stage and in motion pictures. His film connections began back in the old Biograph days when he played opposite Mary Pickford, whom he married, which in fact brought him into worldwide notice as winner of the title of "Sweetheart of the Movies." Later, they were divorced. Moore was born in County Meath, Ireland, and at the age of 11 he with his brother, Tom, and Matt, came to America. Moore has worked almost of the studios and was accounted one of the best of the leading men in filmdom.

CALAVO WITH CHICKEN SALAD, RICH IN FOOD VALUE

ALL INGREDIENTS SHOWN — PEELING CALAVO — FILLING CALAVO WITH SALAD — COMPLETED SALAD

Students' Food to Be Sent From Home

Salt Lake City, Sept. 13 (AP)—University of Utah students intend to solve the eating problem this year themselves. A survey indicates that entrants from rural sections plan to have foodstuffs sent them from home. They'll cook it themselves.

Melt Over Hot Water

Melt chocolate over hot water, never directly over the flame. Don't let the water touch the chocolate container, either.

Time was when the flavorful calavo (alligator pear) was food only for a favored few, on account of its expense—but today, when delicious calavos beckoned me from a nearby market at only 10c, they rightfully belong on even the most carefully budgeted menus, since the calavo contains less water and more food material than any other known fresh fruit.

It stands foremost among all fresh fruits for its protein (muscle and tissue building) content, and contains over twice their average mineral content. The calavo is rich in protective "vitaminnies" too. And it's the easiest digested fruit in captivity. Bland in favor, calavo served by itself should be dressed with lemon juice and salt. Or combine it with pineapple and grapefruit for a delicious fruit cocktail.

Today we are suggesting a Calavo and Chicken Salad, using up the left-overs from Sunday's bird (if you've been able to keep it locked up until now).

INGREDIENTS:

A half a calavo to each person
1 small head of crisp lettuce
Lemon juice
Chicken salad
1 cup mayonnaise
4 tbsps. chili sauce
1 tbsp. finely chopped chives

DIRECTIONS:

Peel the calavo and cut in half, lengthwise. Remove the large stone and sprinkle the pear well all over with lemon juice. Then fill each half heaping full with well-seasoned chicken salad that has been mixed with rich mayonnaise. Mix the chili sauce and chopped chives with the cup of mayonnaise and garnish each stuffed pear with a large tbsp. of it. Place each salad in icebox until thoroughly chilled and serve with crisp potato chips and hot rolls.

Labor Moves to Defeat Contractors Who Put Aliens at Work on State Road Jobs

The Boston Evening American today makes more disclosures regarding brazen law defiance by certain highway contractors who are reaping the benefits of $20,000,000 relief expenditures while barring veterans, citizen labor and local unemployed.

Failure of contractors in charge of state highway construction to live up to the preference act and give jobs to veterans and citizens, as exclusively exposed by the Boston Evening American, has been attacked from an expected quarter.

In labor circles forces are being mobilized today to oppose further appropriations for such public improvements in retaliation, depression or no depression, unless offending contractors toe the mark and be quick about it.

TO WIELD CLUB

Organized labor threatens to wield such a club if conditions are not improved and men entitled to preference are not put to work at proper hours and wages.

This suggested strategy also would favor the plan for a $15,000,000 from the highway fund to relieve cities and towns as first recommended by Benjamin Loring H. Wragg, chairman of the recess committee on city and town expenditures.

The Wragg recommendation startled highway contractors. Any attempt to support it as well as curtailment of further highway appropriations would be a bitter pill, but contractors who have blindly followed their own selfish impulses for greater profits from state contracts had better be wary. Public sentiment is aroused.

BACON OPPOSED

In highway construction circles any mention of the $15,000,000 transfer is like waving a red flag at a bull. Gaspar G. Bacon, president of the Senate, in an address before the Women's Republican Club in Beverly, opposes the Wragg plan to use such a big slice of the highway revenue for the welfare departments of cities and towns.

"It would be unfair to the motorists who have provided the funds," said Bacon. "I feel that the limit of taxation on motorists has been reached. The state highway fund should be used solely for the maintenance and construction of highways."

E. A. Johnson, president of the State Building Trades Council, said today that his organization and organized labor as a whole would back such a plan and heartily support a movement to check further appropriations unless contractors were fair with their help, and hired the men who were entitled to preference.

FEDERAL AID PLAN

The Wellesley link of the Worcester turnpike, the contract to build which was recently awarded to Carlo Bianchi, a Framingham contractor, is the first public improvement in this state to be financed under the federal emergency fund. The Bay State has been allotted $1,716,612 of the federal fund.

The Nebra, official weekly of the American Road Builders' Association, commenting on the federal emergency fund, said:

"Secretary of Agriculture Hyde has apportioned the $120,000,000 provided by the Emergency Relief and Construction Act for expenditure in emergency construction on the federal-aid highway system.

"The act also provides that all contracts involving the expenditure of emergency funds shall contain provisions establishing minimum rates of wages, to be predetermined by the State Highway Department, which contractors shall pay skilled and unskilled labor, and such minimum rates shall be stated in the invitation for bids and shall be included in proposals or bids for this work.

RULES SET FORTH

"The act also authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to make rules and regulations for expending the funds with the view to providing the maximum employment of local labor consistent with reasonable economy of construction; and further provides that all contracts let for the construction of projects shall be subject to the conditions that no convict labor shall be directly employed, that (except in executive, administrative and supervisory positions) so far as practicable, no individual directly employed on any such project shall be permitted to work more than 30 hours in any one week, and that in the employment of labor on any such project preference shall be given, when they are qualified, to ex-service men with dependents.

"The apportionment for the New England states from the Federal emergency funds is as follows:

Massachusetts	$1,716,612
Maine	1,067,079
Connecticut	778,808
New Hampshire	600,000
Rhode Island	600,000
Vermont	600,000

Another instalment will be published in tomorrow's issue of the Boston Evening American.

Tips on Making Grape Jelly

Grapes for jelly should be picked before they are quite ripe. Use only perfect fruit, remove all stems, wash the grapes, drain and crush them with a wooden potato masher in a preserving kettle to start the juices, as no water is used. Stir occasionally to prevent burning. Boil until the seeds separate from the pulp.

Strain the juice through a cheesecloth resting on a strainer, or drain in a jelly bag. Do not press it. Measure an equal quantity of sugar. Heat it in a driping pan in the oven, stir frequently, to prevent browning.

After the juice has boiled 20 minutes add the hot sugar, stirring until the sugar is dissolved; remove to the back of the range, or if gas stove is used, turn out the gas. Put jelly into a heated pitcher and fill the hot tumblers. Let stand for 24 hours, then cover.

News Dealer Wins Law Scholarship

Benjamin Bernard Berenson, who for a number of years sold Boston Evening Americans at the

Upon completion of school next spring he will join a well-known Boston law concern. Berenson is associated with a number of clubs throughout Greater Boston, and has won many prizes as an orator.

School Lunches Require Care These Days

Maybe your youngsters come tumbling home for lunch, or perhaps you are packing baskets with tasty, wholesome sandwiches. Whichever way it is, this is the time when school lunches must be given careful consideration.

If you cook hot lunches at home, here is an excellent dish:

CREAMED EGGS

Season one cup of thin cream sauce with 1 tsp. of prepared mustard. Place it in an omelet pan over a low flame. Slip in four eggs and let them poach. When the whites are nearly firm, sprinkle with 3 tbsps. of grated cheese. Complete the cooking and serve on toast.

This dish supplies additional milk to the menu and the prepared mustard gives new deliciousness to the sauce.

Now for the lunch box, here is a pleasant variation of the ever popular egg sandwich:

EGG SPECIAL

Mash two hard-cooked eggs. Add 1 tsp. mayonnaise and ½ tsp. prepared mustard, and salt to taste. Spread on buttered bread and add a layer of chopped celery or parsley. Top with a second slice of buttered bread.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge Will Help Party

New York, Sept. 13—Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, it was announced at Republican Eastern headquarters tonight, has agreed to serve on a Hoover-Curtis campaign committee.

She will join Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Sr., widow of the former President, Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, widow of the New Jersey senator, and 31 other women on an advisory committee to the Republican Women's campaign activities board.

Hawaiian Fudge Is Ideal for Co-Ed Functions

For feasts at school, co-eds and prep school girls favor Hawaiian Fudge. It goes well with ukelele strains of "O-ooo That Kiss," and with candlelight tales of moonlight and romance. It's so easy to make, too!—

Just boil to 238 deg. (and you'd be surprised to find how many girls own candy thermometers), 2 cups sugar, ½ cup cream, ½ cup crushed pineapple and 1 tbsp. butter. Tint a pale green with fruit or vegetable coloring, and beat until creamy. Add ¼ cup chopped nuts and pour into a buttered pan. Cut in squares.

Woman Asks $100,000 for Security Losses

Mrs. Mabel F. Harris of Brookline, in a $100,000 suit entered in Suffolk Superior Court, claims she was induced by a representative of the Old Colony Corporation to sell Liberty bonds and bonds of the city of New Bedford and the town of Grafton, and substitute securities handled by the Old Colony Corporation with the result she lost heavily.

Her suit is against the Old Colony Trust Company and against the First of Boston Corporation of Massachusetts, the latter being the successor of the First National Corporation of Boston and the Old Colony Corporation.

For the Bridge Table

Mix one cream cheese with 2 tsps. anchovy paste. Add a tbsp. of chopped pimento, 1 tbsp. of prepared mustard and a tbsp. of mayonnaise. Spread on thin slices of white bread and cut in diamond shape sandwiches.

PRICES CUT ON FRIGIDAIRES

The faith held by Frigidaire Corporation that the world is not going to wrack and ruin but that business is on the way back, is reflected in the announcement of a $500,000 advertising campaign in newspapers that cover 89 per cent of all electrically wired homes in the country as a means of introducing the company's invasion of the low-priced electric refrigerator field.

"This remarkable price is made possible," said John S. Pfeil, general manager of the New England sales organization, "by the revolutionary development of a new method of cabinet insulation, whereby great economies are effected both in cost of construction and in saving of space, permitting not only lower prices to the consumer but an increase of one-fourth more food storage space within the same exterior cabinet dimension.

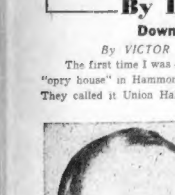
Down Memory Lane!

By VICTOR MOORE, "Vice-President."

The first time I was ever "back stage" was over in the town "opry house" in Hammonton, New Jersey, where I was born. They called it Union Hall. The Guy Brothers' Minstrels were playing there. I had carried a banner in the street parade at the noon hour, was given a seat for the show and was then asked to come back stage and carry water from a pump to the basement up to the dressing rooms where the minstrel men were washing the burnt cork off their faces. And if anyone thinks that wasn't a thrill that comes once in a lifetime they don't know anything at all! I'm sure as I look back at that night, that some vague sort of an urge to become an actor crystalized then and there.



Victor Moore

I was always giving "shows" on our back lot, circus performances, mostly. I rigged up a ring and I used to ride bareback on my father's horse for the edification of the neighborhood. I learned to walk the tight rope and I wasn't half bad on the trapeze and the horizontal bar. Of course I recited pieces on Friday afternoons at school—"Lasca" and Poe's "The Raven" and "The Charge of the Light Brigade." I joined a local amateur dramatic society and was going pretty strong when the family moved to Boston.

My professional debut was made in the Home of the Baked Bean. I was a "super" in a production of "Babes in the Wood" and wore a suit of tin armor. My first salary was $3.50 a week. I kept this form of activity up for three years, working in the daytime in various office boy jobs around town, and spending any spare time I had in polishing up a specialty that I was sure would create something of a sensation if I ever got a chance to show it. Finally my big opportunity came. I was offered a round of villain roles in a Summer repertoire company. We stayed out exactly two nights and stranded—that is the rest of the company did. My father had given me a ten dollar note for "emergencies" and I rode back to Boston in state.

After that I managed to get a chance to show my specialty and was booked in Austin and Stone's Museum—six shows a day. Someone connected with Klaw and Erlanger saw me and engaged me to do the act and play the giant's wife in "Jack and the Beanstalk." It was fearfully miscast, but I rehearsed for four weeks. One day, just before the opening, "Abe" Erlanger took me aside:

"You don't want to act. Some one's been giving you bad advice. Go around to the office and get two weeks' salary and keep away from the theater—please. You just don't belong in it."

I went all to pieces for two weeks. I'd had my "comeupance" with a vengeance. Maybe it didn't give me a lot of satisfaction to stand out on the stage of that same Knicker-bocker theater the night "The Talk ow New York" opened, I was the star. The piece had been written especially for me by George M. Cohan and this same Mr. Erlanger was the latter's partner in its production.

I didn't stay down-hearted long after "Jack and the Beanstalk" experience. I played in every conceivable sort of stock company in every corner of the country—touring "rep shows," resident companies that changed the bill twice a week and gave daily matinees and vaudeville "hook-ups" that played "turkey" dates. In Newark, where I worked for two years in one company, I played everything from a schoolgirl in "School" to Nero in "Quo Vadis." One critic over there singled me out for special mention when we did the Roman play.

"Mr. Victor Moore as Nero tried hard," he wrote.

Once I played an entire season with John Drew in "Rosemary" at the Empire Theater. I had the microscopic role of a servant. I was out to save money that year and lived on four dollars a week, cooking my own meals on a gas jet in a room that was little larger than a closet.

Along about this time I went into vaudeville again, buying an act then current in some of the cheaper houses. It was called "Change Your Act or Back to the Woods" and I played in it on and off for 5 years. It was the most successful act I ever played oftener than any other act that was ever written. It was always a life-saver for me. Whenever I found myself in hard luck or without an engagement on the regular stage I'd always trot it out and I was always able to get time for it.

I started playing in it at $60 a week—that was the price for the entire act. I later received $2,000 a week for it. I guess that tops all records for variation in the return from a single act.

It was shortly after I bought "Change Your Act" that I met Emma Littlefield, who was to become the "missus." I was playing at the Brighton Beach Music Hall in Coney Island and she was playing at Henderson's. We were introduced by a mutual friend and it was love at first sight. We did most of our hand holding and courting, in a darkened auditorium on Surf ave. where they were presenting a spectacle known as the "Johnstown Flood." In a month we were married and she went into "Change Your Act" with me. Eventually we were headlined in every vaudeville theater on the North American continent. We also played four weeks in London. We were always billed as "Moore and Littlefield."

We played Hammerstein's old Victoria Theater so often that George M. Cohan said he got tired of seeing us every time he wanted to look at a vaudeville bill. He came back stage one night:

"Folks," he remarked, "I'm going to take you out of vaudeville. How'd you like to work for me and Sam Harris for about five years?"

We signed on the well known dotted line and he wrote a part for me in his newest show—"Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway"—in which I was co-featured with Fay Templeton. The part was Kid Burns and I played it for two years. In memory I can still hear Fay's wonderful low contralto singing "Mary Was a Grand Old Name." The last time I heard her sing it was last year while I was fishing from my boat in Great South Bay. I had a radio on board and Fay was broadcasting. She chose that moment when I was playing with a seven-pound weakfish and between listening to her luscious tones and trying to land that fish I had a thrilling time.

Bay State Man Seized in Chase Near Death

Hartford, Ct., Sept. 13 (INS)—Arrested after a mile chase in an automobile reported stolen in Holyoke, Mass., James Murphy of Washington, D. C., was found in a cell in police headquarters today unconscious from loss of blood and both his wrists slashed. His condition is critical.

Murphy was arrested with Joseph Feeney, 21, and Paul McManus, 22, both of Holyoke. The latter two were arrested on a breach of peace charge.

Field Buys Favorite Washington Portrait

Chicago, Sept. 13 (AP)—A Gilbert Stuart painting of George Washington, described as the first President's favorite portrait of himself, has come into the possession of Joseph Field of Chicago.

The portrait was given to John Jacobs of Chester County, Pa., by Washington and remained in the Jacobs family for 125 years. It was later sold to G. M. Heckscher of New York at a reputed price of $80,000

COMMITTEE ON DEBTS SILENT ON NORMAN

New York, Sept. 13 (INS)—Members of the committee for the consideration of inter-governmental debts refused to comment on the fact that the announcement of its appointment followed closely upon the secretive visit here of Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

They were equally reticent about discussing the circumstance that a number of the committeemen named by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman, already have publicly declared themselves in favor of war debt revision or cancellation by the United States.

BUTLER FOR REVISION

At Sloan's office it was explained:

"The committee is regarded by Mr. Sloan as being only in its formative or preliminary stage, and will require time to devise a solution to the vexing problem created by the war debts. This problem can only be solved by straightforward business calculation."

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, who is serving as vice-chairman, already has declared for debt revision in a publication sponsored by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, which he heads.

HOW SMITH STANDS

Sen. Borah, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, has an article in the same publication advocating debt cancellation.

Alfred E. Smith, another member of the committee, in no record in his radio talks as being in favor of remitting foreign debts on a percentage basis in return for increased export business from European buyers. At his office it was said:

"Governor Smith's attitude on this question has been so definite there is nothing to add to it now. He has an open mind on the problem, and believes its deliberate discussion by American business executives should go a 'ong way toward clarifying it."

DRUGS HUNTED ON RUM YACHT

Believing that narcotics may be concealed on the craft, customs officials today began a search of the palatial yacht Prudence, owned in Dorchester Bay with $150,000 worth of liquor.

The customs men also will search in the liquor sacks and will open several bottles to see if narcotics may be concealed.

Inch by inch the craft will be gone over in an effort to find more secret compartments, similar to that found by accident when a light fixture was discovered to be a dummy, concealing drugs for a secret panel.

The yacht was seized on a tip she would arrive off Thompson's Island Saturday carrying narcotics.

Thomas F. Finnegan, chief customs inspector, denied today the statement in a morning newspaper that the tip was by a woman who had been insulted and slapped on the face during a party aboard.

Bandits Wreck Train, Kill 9 in New Raid

Harbin, Manchuria, Sept. 13 (AP)—Another outrage by bandits along the Chinese Eastern Railway occurred last night at Sinanchen some spot where the Harbin-Changchun express was wrecked the night before. Forty miles south of Harbin the regular train from Changchun was wrecked, nine Japanese soldiers were killed and a number of passengers were kidnaped.

On the Air

Colleges have lifted the football bleast ban and will allow games to be described this fall . . . "Allow"? . . . They should force the games to be described.

During a game last yr. one an'ncer, instead of telling the spectators about the football game kept describing how cold he was . . . Do you think list'rs sent him heaters, overcoats or even gloves? . . . Naw . . . He got four booklets describing the benefits of African travel, two tickets to S. America and several thousand letters suggesting he go to a place where it's much warmer.

And sports an'ncers say they are misunderstood . . . They never spoke truer words.

Suggested epitaph for most any radio comedian: "May he jest in peace."

There's one thing about the radio this wk. List'rs won't be able to tune out political talks. All they can do is tune from one to the other.

If all the political talkers who are on the air this wk. would be stretched out (Wouldn't that be great!) there'd be enough wind there to blow Boston to bits, and enough baloney represented to supply N. E. delicatessen stores for the next two yrs.

Don't ever say the list'r's is a lost cause. It isn't. It's hopeless.

VALENTINE

By Hazel Livingston

A Heart-Gripping Novel Depicting Love and Disillusionment

"AUNT JULIA, don't you think I ought to have some linens? You know, sheets and things, as well as just pretty lingerie? Marjorie had seven HANDSOME nighties and oh, just scads of the grandest stepins and things, but all she had was two bridge cloths, and I thought at the time that I'd love some real linens—you know, Aunt Julia—NICE ones—"

"I always wanted linen sheets," the spinster said. "Miss Volmer's mother had some, put away in a chest- I always thought—not that I ever wanted to get married, or anything silly like that, but I thought maybe linen sheets with hemstitched borders would be nice for a girl to have."

PLANNING TROUSSEAU

"Yes, but they're so expensive. I thought NICE colored ones, Aunt Julia, some of that eggshell blue, and soft pink, and I want things for the table to be just the opposite—I mean, all white, because silver seems so much brighter on white and you can always have a big centerpiece of flowers, and with amethyst glass and blue pottery plates . . do you think that's too much? The blue dishes and amethyst plates—too arty, I mean?"

"I think you're way ahead of yourself, Pshaw! . . You'll change your mind nine times before you get married. Of course you think it's Joe now, and I'll admit Joe is a good boy—"

Aunt Julia choked on that, but she had to say something nice . . . mustn't antagonize Val too much . . . "you may marry somebody entirely different—somebody you don't even know now."

"Oh, no I won't!" Val smiled quietly, spoke gently, with no antagonism, only truth to convince.

Aunt Julia's heart sank.

Long after Val was asleep that night, she lay awake worrying. That last quiet smile of Val's had convinced her. The girl was serious. She wouldn't change her mind. She'd always liked Joe, ever since he was a kid . . . and yet, since he'd met Lester she forgot him for a while . . . if she could just meet someone else, someone different . . .

For a long while she lay there, considering calling Lester on the telephone. She could do that, bumble herself, to help Val. It would help Val . . . Val was too young to know what was best for her . . . But suppose Val didn't interest Lester any more, and he didn't call . . . No, it wouldn't do . . . she'd have to think of something else.

Every night Val came home with something for the little home she was going to have in Minnesota, . . . two Italian linen towels. A big brass bowl she bought in China-town.

"Look, Aunt Julia, I'm going to use it for a dishpan! And have my kitchen all brass and copper pots and pans, you know, like the Civil War. And I'll get Russian lacquer canisters for tea and coffee and things, and at the windows I'll have theatrical gauze curtains with cross stitch designs in red and black wool—quite a big design, very Russian."

"How are you going to ship all that junk?"

"Oh, boxes and things. It will be easy," Val said airily.

Every time Val mentioned Minnesota, it was a knife turning in Julia Macfarlane's heart.

It wasn't right. Val was off to work the next day and she was alone that she remembered the things she would have said . . . "Brass dishpan! Perfect nonsense! Copper cooking utensils! Enough to give you gangrene of the arm! . . . some spot where the Harbin-Changchun express was wrecked the night before. Forty miles south of Harbin the regular train from Changchun was wrecked, nine Japanese soldiers were killed and a number of passengers were kidnaped.

AUNT HAS IDEA

To rap the climax, Val came home that Saturday afternoon with a big pasteboard box in her arms.

"Begonias," she said, lifting the lid, "Look, aren't they pretty? I couldn't resist them, because I can remember how sweet they were, growing in pots in Millie's rooms, when I was ever so little. I'm going to get some five finger maiden hair fern, too. They were so pretty, all growing together, in pots on the windowsill."

The sharp words that had risen to Julia Macfarlane's tongue were never said. She never told Val how perfectly absurd it was to pay expressage on flower pots.

Millie . . . the one person in the world who could distract Val's mind from Joe . . .

And Val's mind must be distracted. She mustn't marry Joe . . . one of the good-for-nothing Careys . . . mustn't marry into a family like that . . .

Millie had been trying to interfere long enough. Now was her chance! Let her do it, if she could!

Val had a letter from her mother. The first in many years.

She fingered the envelope greedily, put the letter back in her pocket, brought it out, read it over and over.

Julia Macfarlane watched, her sallow, thin face drawn, her skin tight over the temples, hurt because it took Val so long to tell her news, and when she did, she told it so guardedly:

"Aunt Julia, it's from Millie. She's in Santa Barbara. She says that she has been traveling all around, and that she's had several theater engagements—I never knew that. She's been quite busy. But now she's living there in Santa Barbara, and she says there's quite a large house and she hasn't been awfully well, so she'd like me to come for the summer. And she says you told her I was thinking of getting married, and she wants to talk all that over with me. But she'd like Joe—I know she would."

"Yes, probably."

"Aunt Julia! The way you say that! You know you like him yourself. But then, you always were a man hater!"

"It isn't that. I was just thinking how your mother always wanted you to save your complexion so you could marry a French count. Remember, Val?"

Val remembered. Laughed a little. French count! An if any French count could compare with Joe!

Two days after Millie's letter, a draft came. Val was to get her ticket, buy a few necessary things, come at once.

Julia Macfarlane watched and waited, said nothing. She saw how even the letters from Millie were pushed aside for the ones from Joe. Going to see Millie wasn't anything compared to going to Minnesota later to marry Joe.

Val didn't even want to buy many things for her trip, and she just took a short leave of absence from her work—"Because I'll come back, and I want everything new for my trousseau. I'm going to need so many things when I get married. I want my things to be just the loveliest in the world—I mean, considering their simplicity."

Aunt Julia did most of the packing. Bought her one of those new suitcase trunks, promised to take good care of the four colored sheets, the brass dishpan and the begonias.

VAL STARTS TRIP.

Maybe she had done wrong. Maybe Millie wouldn't be able to dissuade Val, and she'd just be losing her that much earlier. Maybe Millie would put wrong ideas into her head . . . But now that wasn't fair to Val. You couldn't do that to a girl as sound and fine as she . . . thanks to her good bringing up.

Four of the girls from the office and Aunt Julia went to the station to see Val off for Santa Barbara. It was her first real trip on a train, and at the last moment she was ablaze with excitement. She had two boxes of candy, and a corsage of bay roses, and two magazines.

She would have liked to go on the night train. It would have been much more exciting to sleep on the train. But Aunt Julia insisted on the day coach. The observation platform almost made up for the sleeper. She sat out there for hours, gripping in the speed, and the ever-changing view. Toward evening she grew tired, and impatient for the trip to be over.

Long before it was time to pull into Santa Barbara, Val went into the dressing room to prepare for getting off. She did so want to look nice for Millie. She just must be looking her best, so that Millie wouldn't be disappointed. But suppose Millie didn't know . . . suppose she didn't know Millie?

STRANGE REUNION

She was nervous and trembling when the train stopped. There were so many people, the train was so long. The porter picked up her bags, walked along by the seats. She followed, feeling selfconscious, awkward . . . scanning every face, looking for a tall, lovely Millie . . . or was she wrong? Would Millie be middle-aged?

"Val! Darling! I'd have known you in Egypt! How you've changed—not a bit, since you were eight!"

The same voice, the throaty, sweet voice . . . oh, the sweetness the loveliness of Millie!

"And you haven't changed! Oh, Millie! Millie—I'm so glad—"

They both cried, clung to each other.

"I'm glad this Vincent . . . Vincent, my little Valentine . . . both V's—I call Vincent Vee sometimes . . . Oh, Val, darling—I'm so glad you're here. You'll like Vincent Vincent, you've got to love my valentine, but of course you will—"

Val was in back of a tall, pale-coated, laughing, crying Millie, the tall, erect figure of a man.

"Jim!" she thought, vividly.

But it wasn't Jim. Millie called him Vincent, and this man was different . . . older, handsomer . . .

Her heart sank. She shook his hand, murmured something about being glad to see him . . . Was he? Why hadn't Millie told her? Oh, why did Millie have to bring him, their very first meeting?

VAL CONFUSED.

Still with her arm about her, Millie piloted Val through the station, past the people to a big, long car. Val noticed, with comfort that she didn't have to look up to Millie, that Millie had to look up to her! She was taller than her mother . . . And she had thought of Millie, as being so tall.

The man, Vincent, followed just behind them, directing the porter. He smiled jovially, said pleasant things to Val. He climbed into the driver's seat. Val and her mother sat behind.

Millie chattered. Val answered, laughed, talked. Afterwards she couldn't remember a thing that was said.

RADIO WAITS THE OLD MAESTRO

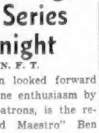
Bernie Begins Fall Series Tonight

By N. F. T.

An occasion looked forward to with genuine enthusiasm by loudspeaker patrons, is the return of "Old Maestro" Ben Bernie and "all the lads" tonight. Listen for his suave satire (WEEI at 9 o'clock.

HEADING HOMEWARD

Ben brings his initial 1932-33 program to NBC microphones in New York this evening. It will be three weeks before he bits his Chicago hotel spot, there to remain. He hasn't completed his extended personal appearance stage tour. Next Tuesday finds him taking the air from Buffalo, while the following week his "Happy Tuesday Ladies and Gentlemen" originates at Detroit.



Ben Bernie

By jings, this switching of Bernie from Columbia to National sound sanctums, may mean retaliation on the part of CBS. Rumors are rampant about Vincent Lopez pulling up his NBC stakes now about to become sponsored commercially under Columbia auspices.

Thus things begin to take on old-time aspects again. Stealing stars from each other was one of the thrilling indoor sports involving rival radio network chains last year. Morton Downey is another celebrity at present flirting with Fifth Avenue halls as a result of his money muddle being as yet unsettled with CBS.

STAGE STAR SIGNED

Latest among stellar stage personalities to accept radio proposi-tioning is William Faversham. His footlight career covers almost a half century.

Wm. Faversham

Roles in which he has excelled include that of "Romeo," opposite Maude Adams, "Valentine Day" in the play "Pasteboard" with Minnie Maddern Fiske, as well as others too numerous to set down at this writing. Next Sunday Mr. Faversham will be starred on the weekly "Roses and Drums" broadcast offering (WAAB) from 6:30 to 7 o'clock. He will be cast as Captain Perry when the historic battle of Lake Erie is dramatized on the air.

Norman Thomas, the Socialist candidate for President, takes an NBC network twin tomorrow night (WBZ) between 10:30 and 10:45.

WORD FROM THE WEST

Governor Roosevelt has two studio speeches to make over big hookups this week. Tomorrow afternoon is the first (WNAC) address, due to last until 3:15 and broadcast from Topeka, Kan. He speaks again at Salt Lake City on Saturday night, the exact time 10:30 to 11:15 p. m., when his program also occupies WNAC waves.

After much preparation, expense and nation-wide publicity centered around the 40-fathom dive Prof. William Beebe was going to make next Bermuda last Sunday, subsequently describing his findings for the listening world, unfavorable weather conditions prevented the stunt being staged. No word from NBC suggests a later date, so apparently it's what the trolley conductors announce reaching the end of their run—all off. One somewhat skeptical subscriber says the idea sounded "fishy" in the first place.

MAX VS. MICKEY, MAYBE?

Now that the Max Schmeling-Mickey Walker fuss has been put over until the 23d, radio analysts are sizing up the situation from an air angle, figuring the fight would have wide appeal in the parlors.

Added good news is word about Irvin S. Cobb being given the guest artist spot on the special NBC half hour next Tuesday night, most likely to be heard hereabouts over WEEI at 9 o'clock. His brand of subtle southern humor is always refreshing.

Analysis of Nation-Wide Poll By Hearst Newspapers on Presidential Candidates

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nationwide Presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

It also shows the majority each candidate has in each State in which he is leading.

In addition, it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each State, as compared with the last preceding report from the State. These State reports are usually a week apart.

The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each State where he has improved his position, as compared with the last preceding report from that State.

They are not present in Luckies ... the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

BOY HERO GIVES BLOOD TO SAVE HIS PAL

THIS IS LIFE

MORRIS MARKEY GIVES US A DIFFERENT VIEW OF OUR COUNTRY

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

PROF. ROGERS

EVERY ONCE AND AGAIN a mess of New York magazine writers—the kind who have just issued a call to all the "intellectuals" of America to get solidly behind the Communist party —issue a book purporting to be the definitive scrutiny of these United States. Although written by comparatively highly paid and underworked people, these books are very low in their minds about the horrible lot of the American common man and woman at having to put up with such an unnecessarily inartistic and unintellectual civilization. The name of the editor seems usually to be a Mr. Harold Stearns or a Mr. Waldo Frank and the contributors always include a Mr. Theodore Dreiser and a Mr. Stuart Chase.

There's a new book just out, which, like Mr. Ed Wynn's radio programs, is "different." It is by Mr. Morris Markey, writer of fascinating articles for The New Yorker, and is called "This Country of Yours" (Little, Brown & Co.). Unlike the "civilization books," which have the air of being written in the Harvard or the Yale Club library, or even the C. C. N. Y. Club library, this book was written, apparently, in the over night stops of a Ford automobile trip which took Mr. Markey from coast to coast.

Writing While Rambling

Just as his articles about New York were excellent reporting, full of strange, out of the way facts, shrewdly dug out and amusingly presented, so this survey of our United States, in which he talked to hundreds of our fellow countrymen, has about it the persuasive ring of actuality. The man apparently started out without preconceptions. He rambled as he pleased, talked with everybody he came in contact with, met the wealthy, the middle class, the poor and the by-products, and tried to come to some conclusions about what they said. The best way I can give you some idea of the interesting quality of the book is to jot down, almost at random, some of the statements and opinions I ran across.

"Along the Mesabi the children are the gods. There are no adult amusements, no folk life, no rural delights. They are anaesthetized to all thoughts except one and that is for the next generation . . . Pioneering leaves no strength to found what we call a culture . . . People up north (the intellectuals) are soft as babies. They can't realize there are some people left in the world who don't mind working hard for a living . . . Nobody listens to preachers any more. There's nothing they have to say for grown-up men . . . When you come right down to it. I don't guess anybody cares very much who gets elected or what happens down in Washington. Government don't interest us very much. . But politics does . . .

"A gentleman in Chicago speaks to his friends: 'The next time I am forced to entertain a member of the United States Senate, I will not force him on the attention of other people' . . . We are the greatest ex post facto nation in the world. We just go about our little ways and let things happen as best they can. We don't lift a finger to make 'em happen right. But if they happen wrong, we are a nation of critics after the fact. Plain laziness is part of it, but the main defect is the machinery . . . The houses of the simple folk upon the prairies are probably the most dismal on earth. Their architecture is without meaning and without imagination. No air of permanence hangs over them. You know instinctively that the occupants have no affection for the walls between which they live.

Pacific Empire Behind Times

"Out of 10,000 boys and girls (at a Western state university) how many are really educable? Ninety per cent of them could not be educated in any college on earth. They simply do not possess the eagerness and the flexibility of mind, the downright gray matter to get hold of knowledge . . . On the prairies you get the impression that most of the young people who are not in colleges are drifting. None of them seem definitely settled, definitely launched upon workaday lives . . .

"The people of the Pacific Empire are behind the times. The great barrier does not retard the arrival of news from the outer world. But it does retard the passage of those subtler things we call ideas. While living becomes incredibly more complex every day, they insist on believing it to be a simple thing . . . There must be nearly a million people, walking or in cars, flowing along the roads of the country, homeless and not wanting a home. They have adopted the nomadic life, by preference or by necessity . . .

"The old cliche is wrong; the cliche which holds that Americans are superb business men who know little or nothing about how to live. I felt I was learning that the American is a rather poor business man, taken by and large. His resources of shrewdness and defence in bad times are almost negligible, for with every surge of prosperity he rushes forward, burning his bridges behind him. But he does know a good deal about how to live. He has learned so well what to do with his leisure that the office grind has lost all its wonted charm for him. He has never really devoted his mind to business. Work has simply been an anaesthetic to prevent his mind from becoming bored. Now he is learning how to occupy his mind, even with so trivial a thing as golf—and it is business that bores him.

Existence Too Complex in Baltimore

"In Baltimore: all of our existence is too complex. You have no idea how many of us spend half our time having something done to us to keep us from dying. We have dying on the brain. An enormous number can't think of anything else. Everybody is health conscious . . . In these times we worship a god called Science. I think it is a very good god to worship. But we who stand in the attitude of priests of the cult should take a leaf from older religions. We should keep most of the secret manifestations of the god within the temple and not broadcast to the mob every whimsical fancy he may display. We do broadcast such things now. As a consequence is a general confusion that always arises from a smattering of knowledge. If it continues we'll have a complete population of neurotics in a generation or two.

"There is, in America, no real, fundamental desire to do first class work . . . The Boston Post Road is now the most shockingly ugly road in all America. . . . When our system of capitalism and industrialism and mechanization has come to the bloom, when everybody has bought everything and the will to possess is satisfied, we shall make the slightly shocking discovery that the system is no good. . . .

"I asked hundreds of people, from coal miners who were hungry, to bankers and business people and shop girls and housewives, what they were getting from their religion in these disturbed times. Only one man said that his church, his God, was a prop to him. Nowhere did I encounter a genuine religious feeling. Everywhere I encountered skepticism, distrust or amusement at the beliefs of our fathers. And so I came to the conclusion that Christianity is hardly to be considered at all as a force in American life, in directing its current or its desires."

As you will see from these hurried sample fragments, a very interesting book indeed. A kind of kaleidoscope, an echo of hundreds of voices trying to tell the truth. Mr. Markey seems to have no prejudices one way or the other. At the end he sums up. He says simply enough:

"We seem to be committed irrevocably to a policy of drift."

IRELAND HIT BY 8 TARIFF, SAYS ARCHBISHOP

England's New Laws Bring Heavy Losses to Erin's Farmers, Says Baltimore Prelate

England's new tariff laws have resulted in heavy losses for farmers in Ireland, Archbishop Michael J. Curley of Baltimore said today on his arrival in Boston on the liner Adriatic.

The Baltimore prelate completed his 29th crossing of the Atlantic on his arrival here and was at the death bed of his mother, with whom he had spent the past 11 summers at Athlone

She died at the age of 82 years 11 days after he celebrated the Pontifical High Mass which closed the Eucharistic Congress in Ireland

"Ireland," he said, "is certainly an agricultural country and England, of course, is its best and, one might say, its only market—only three hours away.

"However, the prohibitive tariff on agricultural products is having an effect which Ireland cannot withstand without heavy losses to its farmers. Ireland, naturally, is not England's only market, but England as well as Ireland will eventually lose through the present tariff conditions.

"There are very many proposals on the De Valera program for economic rehabilitation which are most praiseworthy. There are, of course, people who are opposed to anything and everything De Valera does. Some of the features of De Valera's plans are meeting with opposition from the farmers who are suffering heavy losses because of England's tariff laws."

Archbishop Curley will leave the Adriatic in New York tomorrow for a visit of several days before continuing to Baltimore.

AID 8 SUFFER FROM WELFARE ERROR STOPPING DOLE

Board Admits Action Without Investigation; Goodwin Won't Order Probe of the Frauds

An error by the welfare board, which resulted in stopping a dole being paid to a deserving South Boston man, has caused untold hardship and suffering to him, his wife and their six children, it became known today.

On the basis of an anonymous letter, and without investigation according to the admission of Edward H. Willey, treasurer of the board, the welfare department suspended payment to Romeo Peterson of Ward st., South Boston, three weeks ago.

The anonymous letter informed the board that Peterson owned one $15,000 house and two others, had leases on others and had a $60 a week job as a plumber.

IS JOBLESS AND POOR.

Willey said the dole was "automatically stopped" with receipt of the letter.

The investigation, in due course, was begun. It is still under way, Willey said, but it has progressed to the point where he is certain Peterson will be replaced on the [illegible]

He and Mrs. C. Heffernan, visitor for the board, discovered that Peterson owned no property, has a lease on no property and has no job.

Further than that, their investigation showed the couple and their children to be in extreme want and the children in such poor physical condition that Willey, who made a personal visit to the home, notified the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Willey said he found that Peterson once had an equity in property but lost it

GOODWIN WON'T PROBE

When it was remarked to him that the writer of the anonymous letter was no more to blame than the welfare board for acting without investigation, he made no comment. The personality has taken no interest in the case and hopes to see Peterson restored to the list of those receiving aid

On the heels of the refusal of Chairman Frank Goodwin of the Finance Commission to investigate the welfare board, police officials indicated that more than 50 per cent of the 800 cases they are probing showed fraud

In his refusal to carry out the order unanimously adopted yesterday by the City Council Chairman Goodwin pointed out that Mayor Curley and the Chamber of Commerce had accepted a report in which the commission had recommended the reorganization of the department with the substitution of a single paid commissioner for the present unpaid board of 12 overseers.

Meanwhile Commr. Hultman's report on the first 500 cases is all incomplete but it was learned today that the cases will be classed as definitely more or unworthy

At the same time Acting Mayor Gallagher hurled another bombshell into the probe with his assertion that the much talked of report of the police commissioner "wouldn't amount to anything."

HULTMAN CRITICIZED

"I believe the report of the police commissioner won't amount to anything," said Acting Mayor Gallagher. "I do not believe the police have found anything of importance. I shall read the report very carefully and will make it public to the newspapers. If there is anything that calls for immediate action I will take that action. I will not communicate with Mayor Curley relative to the report after receiving it."

A leading member of the welfare board criticized the police commissioner in no uncertain manner for his delay in making a definite report on the 296 "possibly unworthy" cases

FAILS TO BARE ACT; BANDAGE TELLS STORY

Parents Even in Dark; Student Goes to Hospital When He Hears Chum Is in Danger

All heroes don't wear medals. There's Alfred Levine, 15, Medford high school student, for example. His badge of bravery is only a bandage on his arm.

Alfred wouldn't have said anything about his heroic act, either. But you can't carry a bandaged arm into a school room without answering a lot of questions.

Piecing together his answers, here is Alfred's story. Walter Cunningham of Pinestead rd, West Medford, and Albert, who lives in Woods ave., Medford Hillside, were schoolmates and chums. Walter went to the City Hospital recently, and his condition was so poor that doctors decided that a blood transfusion was necessary.

Alfred heard about it. He didn't know much about transfusions. He only knew that Walter, his friend, needed new blood

KEEPS PLAN TO SELF

"What's a little blood?" Alfred thought. The big thing was to help Walter get better. So, without even telling his family, without saying a word to his friends, Alfred went to City Hospital to Walter's doctor, and said

"Here I am. You can give Walter some of my blood if he needs it."

Just as he would offer Walter a baseball glove, or a football helmet.

The doctors accepted Albert, and into Walter's veins streamed the blood of his friend. A pint of blood to buy back his friend's health.

SCHOOL AS USUAL

Alfred appeared in school today, a bit weak, but happy at the knowledge that Walter would soon be with him again

He wonders why such a fuss is being made over him

STATE PROBES GIRL CHARGES

The State Department of Labor today stepped into investigation of complaints by Lynn girl shoe workers that they have been forced to submit to attentions from their employers to hold their jobs

According to Mayor Manning, the State department advised him today that a representative was being sent to investigate conditions

Mayor Manning also revealed that one Lynn shoe manufacturer who had been summoned to the mayor's office yesterday for a conference, had failed to appear making his third such failure

As part of the investigation of factory conditions in the city the mayor declared that complaints have been received by the Lynn board of health regarding unsanitary conditions in rest rooms for women in a number of factories.

Norwood Aid Official Held as Woman's Attacker

With Norwood residents jamming the courthouse, Arthur B Rogers head of the Norwood Gas Co. and member of the Norwood Family Welfare Board, was arraigned in Dedham court today charged with attack on a Norwood mother.

Through his counsel, Rogers waived the reading of the complaint and pleaded not guilty. He was held in $500 by Judge Clifford B Sanborn for a hearing September 21

He was arrested yesterday in the home of Mrs Patrick Foley, Concord ave., Norwood, the mother of six children, after the woman complained to police. Two policemen and the woman's husband were hiding in the cellar and at a prearranged signal came out and Rogers was arrested

Mrs Foley said that Rogers had visited her home about once a week in his position as member of the welfare board Her husband has been unemployed for several months and the family has been receiving $9 weekly from the board

She said on several occasions she had asked Rogers to obtain medicine for one of her children, who was sick, and he refused unless she agreed to his advances. She resisted and told her husband. They were afraid to say anything, fearing they would lose their weekly aid

Mrs. Foley finally complained to police and yesterday Sergt. Thomas Lydon and Patrolman Frank Mulane went to the Foley home. They stationed themselves in the cellar with the husband when Rogers visited the house.

Mrs. Foley declared that Rogers again made advances to her yesterday and that when she screamed the officers rushed out and placed him under arrest

DIVORCES MATE WHO BEAT HER

Mrs. Jessie M. Shea, of Saugus, won a divorce from William D. Shea, of Dedham, and custody of their 15-year-old son, in Dedham court today, on charges of cruelty and abuse.

At a previous hearing in July, Shea acted as his own attorney and asked his wife if she were ever trapped in a Dedham hotel with a ranking officer of the Dedham police force. Following her denial then, Judge McCoole advised him he would be required to file stipulations and secure counsel if he wanted to bring out such evidence.

When the case resumed this morning, Shea again appeared as his own attorney and questioned his wife who told him he struck her on many occasions and knocked her down.

Shea then asked court if he might again inquire into the hotel incident and Judge McCoole ruled he could not, inasmuch as he had filed no stipulations.

William Jr., son of the Sheas, testified to seeing his father grab his mother by the throat and strike her head against a chimney. He said he had to call police several times to protect her. Shea denied hitting his wife and said he "thought the world of her."

DANCE PLANNED TO BENEFIT NORTH SHORE BABIES HOSPITAL

BEACON HILL

—by—

Betty Alden

THANK GOODNESS, PEOPLE ARE COMING BACK TO town for the autumn shopping, to open houses or search for the perfect apartment, to put Kitty and Danny into schools . . . for any reason at all that will make things a bit brighter socially around town . . .

Mrs. Prescott Cumner

We are beginning to weary of the long rides down to the shores, the cape and inland to find items for this column . . .

Have you noticed that almost every wedding this month has been miles away from the city . . . ? Seashore and country wedding may be pictorially more beautiful but they are a strain on the florists, he caterers, the modistes and "yours faithfully" who has to tear over the roads at breakneck speed to make the "edition" . . .

Especially at this time of the season when WE, too, must shop for a hat . . . one of our heaviest assignments . . .

So yesterday we went on tour for a brown chapeau . . . as luck would have it almost all of our "left-over" fall clothes are brown, NOT one of the fashionable colors this year . . .

We were offered Burgundys, blues and greens . . . lots of blacks but there were few browns to be had . . . however,

We did meet a large crop of our friends who were likewise engaged and disappointed and had a really pleasant morning . . .

Smart in Grey Worsted Sport Suit

FIRST WE SAW MRS. PRESCOTT CUMNER OF COHASSET . . . you know she has the darling little curly-headed daughter who is already well known although her deb year is still at least 10 years hence . . .

Mrs. Cumner looked very smart in a gray worsted sport suit with matching turban as she strolled around Best & Co.'s attractive shop in Brookline . . .

Dropping in at Helen Crosby's to see the very latest creations we met Mrs. John Saltonstall, one of our most beautiful younger matrons, with her small daughter and a friend wending their way to the Chilton Club for lunch . . .

Attractive

MRS. SALTONSTALL, WHO was the attractive Margaret Tucker of New York, certainly looked [illegible] deep wine red cloth dress [illegible] known [illegible] most ex[illegible]

ALWAYS A DELIGHT FOR [illegible]

SHE TOLD US THAT HER mother Mrs. Greene has taken an apartment on Chestnut st. for the winter. She has lived at the Hotel Lenox [illegible] in the past few years.

ANOTHER VISITOR TO Beacon Hill this season will be Frances and Hope Brown and family of Salem. Frances is one of the most popular of the young crowd in the Witch City and he will be missed from the group. The Browns will come to Boston to place their small daughter in school.

Appointed

MET YOUNG MRS. WEED who was the pretty Margaret Jarvis on Chestnut st. and she is thrilled that her husband Mr. Frederick R. Weed has been appointed master of English at St. Paul's school. He was graduated from that exclusive boys college and is returning to meter out some of the knowledge gained there. The Weeds will move to Concord this week to take up residence near the school. Mrs. Jarvis of Pittsburgh, the young bride's mother has already taken a house on Beacon Hill for the winter.

Mrs. F. R. Weed

The so-very-popular Mrs. Frederick Weitwell of Cape Cod and Marlborough st. motored up from Barnstable for the Brewer-Codman wedding and will spend a few days with the Russell Codmans of Manchester-by-the-Sea before returning.

Swampscott to Be Scene of Event

A group of more than a hundred of the young people along the North Shore are getting up one of those attractive subscription dances for next Saturday evening. The event is to take place at the New Ocean House and the entire proceeds are to be given to the North Shore Babies Hospital.

Many Are Aided

At the present time, as given in the monthly report of the Superintendent there are 30 patients at the hospital, and most of them are being given medical or surgical care free of charge. The dance has been planned to assist in [illegible] the expenses [illegible] and these young people are [illegible] working to make it a big success.

Mrs. Alvin T. [illegible] with Mrs. Joseph B. Ely, Mrs. William S. Youngman and Mrs. Frederick E. Snow head the list of patronesses for this entertainment.

On the board of managers for the North Shore Babies Hospital are Miss Sylvia Berson, Mrs. Robert Stow Bradley, Mrs. John G. Bu[illegible]beck, Miss Isabela M. Cammann, Mrs. George H. Clark, Mrs. Charles A. Cook, Mrs. Wallace Cook, Mrs. William H. Coolidge, Jr., Mrs. Albert M. Creighton, Mrs. Samuel S. Crocker, Jr., and Mrs. Evans R. Dick.

Real Tragedy of Suicide Hits The Wife—How Can She Ever Get Over It?

"WHY DID HE DO IT?"

That is what Paul Bern's brother, his friends in Hollywood, the police and the world at large all asked about the tragically dramatic suicide of the motion picture executive, who had money, power and beautiful Jean Harlow for bride—all the kingdoms of the world, apparently, for which to live.

[illegible]

"How can Jean Harlow ever get over it?"

[illegible]

Her pain is much more than [illegible] become less than all-absorbing. [illegible] erable burden [illegible] any human be[illegible] failed another, failed helplessly [illegible]

WHAT SHE THINKS

Jean Harlow and the widow of every suicide must think in [illegible]

"I should have kept him from doing this! I was his wife, his partner, the person who stood closest to him. I should have shared his pain, his desperation—shared and helped to bear it. I should have comforted him. I should have understood. Somehow I failed him, and he suffered all alone until he could suffer no more. How can I bear it? How can I ever forget?"

[illegible] everything any wife can be to a man.

We know one such woman. Her husband was a lawyer, who after [illegible] had gambled in the market with the property of which he was a trust officer, had lost it—and [illegible]

RESEARCH REVEALS ALL-BRAN RICH IN HEALTH-ELEMENTS

Helps Correct Constipation with "Bulk" and Vitamin B; Also Has Iron

Recent scientific research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains two things needed to overcome temporary and recurring constipation. It has "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract.

These two important food-elements promote regular habits, and help do away with the headaches, loss of appetite and energy, so often the result of constipation.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is [illegible] in action [illegible] lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable.

Isn't this pleasant "cereal way" far more healthful than using pills and drugs—so often habit-forming?

Just eat two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's daily—enough for most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Besides, ALL-BRAN brings your body twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Equally tasty as a cereal with milk or cream, or used in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Cataract in Eye Cured Easily

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

Dr. Copeland

WITHIN recent years a great deal of scientific research has been devoted to discovering the cause and prevention of cataract. As yet the cause is unknown. Most authorities believe that the disease is brought about by some chemical change within the body.

It is usually associated with advancing years. As we grow old [illegible] deposits of opaque material [illegible] of the eye. This condition produces a haziness of the vision in the afflicted eye.

Cataract is most commonly seen in old age although it may occur in the young at birth even. It is often seen accompanying certain general diseases. It is exceedingly common in elderly people suffering from diabetes.

It may follow the taking of certain poisons, such as ergot and naphthalin. They interfere somehow in the nutrition of the lens of the eye. The accumulated poisons attack this delicate structure.

Unfortunately, many a victim of cataract goes on for years, not knowing he can be helped. He may not go to his physician for [illegible] until both eyes are involved. By a simple operation he may be kept from years of partial blindness.

The symptoms of this condition appears so gradually that the late cause may be overlooked. As a rule, there is a gradual decrease of vision without pain or inflammation of the eyes.

The operation itself is a simple one and need cause no fear. If surgery has been advised do not delay.

By proper care of the eyes, many of [illegible] ailments may be escaped. If you need glasses get them. Never permit foolish pride to cause you to spurn glasses. Not only will you see better by having them but they will help to prevent blindness, even cataract perhaps.

Health Queries

Mr. F. H. Q.—How can I reduce?

A.—Eat very sparingly of starches, sugars and fats. Get regular systematic exercise. A gradual reduction in the amount of food consumed with the regular exercise will work wonders in most cases.

K. S. Q.—What will reduce the ankles?

A.—It is difficult to reduce weight in any part of the body without reducing the weight in general. Exercise such as walking, dancing and skating may prove helpful.

Mr. A. Q.—What causes one to clear the throat often?

A.—This may be due to catarrh. Send self-addressed stamped envelope for full particulars and repeat your question.

Daily True Story

Money on the Red

"THEY'RE UNTRUSTWORTHY, unreliable, bad-tempered vixens," declared Jim Kirk, young assistant district attorney, hotly, and wound up his tirade by adding, "My motto is—Never trust a redhead!"

His brother lawyer grinned and asked, "Who is she?"

"What do you mean, 'who is she'?"

"Just what I said. You're in love with a redheaded wench who's probably stood you up on a date and now you're sore, but wait till you see her again. You'll sing a different tune."

"The devil I will. I'm going to teach that redheaded menace a lesson." Kirk looked [illegible]

He looked up from his [illegible] to find himself staring into a pair of blue eyes which despite their contriteness still managed to retain their habitual look of mischief.

The glimmering blue evening wrap she wore made the girl's red hair startlingly alive.

LATE AND HUNGRY

Jim woke out of his daze and murmured, "Miss Leona Ritchie, Mr. Dakin."

"I'm late, but I'm hungry, too," Leona said plaintively. "Dreadfully hungry. I haven't had a bite since breakfast."

"I think I'll leave you two to make it up alone," Atty. Dakin announced and, bowing to Leona and grinning at Jim, took his leave.

Immediately Leona moved her chair around to Jim's side of the table.

"What's wrong, honey? It's not just my being late—I couldn't help that, honest."

Jim groaned. "Wrong? I'm up a tree, Leona. Licked!" Tenderly Leona patted the clenched fist on the table.

"Don't talk like that!"

"You know the Norelius case? The girl's backed down on her confession. Says we coerced her and she talked under pressure. Makes it tough for me. I got that confession out of her. And we can't convict without it. You know what that means."

"Isn't there anything you can do? Can't you think of something? I wouldn't give up so easily."

"You wouldn't! Oh, sure, there's one thing I can do. Nothing easier," Jim's tone was sarcastic. "All I have to do is make friends with Big Tim and get him to admit he faked the alibi for Norelius. Of course, that's simple."

"I love you, Jim," said Leona softly and irrelevantly.

"Do you? Why don't you marry me then? I've only asked you to a hundred times."

Our friend [illegible] unpleasant news. It was Dakin who told Jim of seeing Leona at Connie's Inn with Big Tim, Maizie Du Val and others of the Norelius mob.

Jim finished up what work he could in his mental state and hurried home. It was 4 o'clock when his phone began ringing. He had been dozing intermittently and tossing about on his bed. Probably a strong number he thought then got out of bed and answered.

The soft yet vital little voice coming over the wires sent a tingle down his spine.

TORN BY DOUBTS

"Jim, I can't say much. Meet me at the Tropic Nights Cafe. Bring some one and come in the back way—up the stairs." There was a click. She was gone before he could say a word.

Torn by doubts Jim feared another double-cross. Yet that voice called him and in a few minutes after rousing Dakin by phone and getting a sleepy promise to meet him at Columbus Circle he was on his way.

The Tropic Nights was way out on the [illegible] Road—but after picking up Dakin and getting [illegible] Jim's [illegible] car made it in [illegible]

The two men made their way up the back stairs and to the second floor where Jim knew the private rooms to be. They could hear a woman screaming and Jim recognized Big Tim's [illegible] voice saying "shut up," over and over again.

Then they heard a scuffle and the [illegible] voice again.

"Don't you touch me, Tim. I've got too much on you and you know it. And I'm goin' to tell everything I know. Two-timin' me with that redhead and after all I've done for you! Perjuring myself and lying for you and your crowd!"

"Shut you mouth!" came Big Tim's growl.

"Shut my mouth, will I? You throw the redhead out this minute or I'll get on that witness stand tomorrow and, so help me, I'll stick to that confession and tell—everything!"

Jim gently turned the door [illegible] unlocked. [illegible] he and Dakin stepped into the room.

Leona's blue eyes winked a signal to him at once: "Play up!"

"Leona!" he cried. "What are you doing here?"

Leona drew back a step or two until she was beside Big Tim, her hand on his arm.

"What am I doing here?" She laughed provocatively. "What's that to you? A woman has a right to be with the man she's going to marry. There's no law against that, is there, Mr. District-Attorney?"

APOLOGIZED TO JIM

At her words Maizie's hands reached out to claw at Leona's face. Almost involuntarily Big Tim thrust an arm protectingly around Leona. That gesture seemed to clinch matters. Maizie ran across the room to Jim.

"You take me with you. And keep me locked up so this bunch of double-crossing—can't get at me."

With Jim and Dakin swiftly [illegible] the room before Big Tim [illegible]

[illegible] Jim and Dakin were [illegible] apologetically.

"I know how you feel, old boy. I guess you're right on that redhead business."

"Right? I'm all wet." Jim was quiet for a moment. Then he said emphatically, "I'm the biggest fool that ever lived. And Leona . . . she's the gamest, most loyal sweetheart a man ever had."

Dakin looked puzzled.

"Wake up," Jim grinned. "We'll invite you to the wedding when Leona's show closes. Don't you get it yet?"

Dakin shook his head.

"She was acting all the time, took all the risks to get the Du Val woman so jealous she'd get even with Big Tim at any cost."

Solemnly Dakin reached across the table and shook hands with Jim. "After this," he declared, "my money goes on red every time. You're a lucky dog, son."

Emotion Takes Toll of Beauty

NO WOMAN who values her good looks can afford to go on an emotional spree, give way to jealousy, harbor disappointment, have brain flurries about trifles. Emotional outbursts take their toll of physical strength, increasing heart action, [illegible] interfering with digestion, producing fatigue bags. What they do to the face is plenty: they carve in worry lines, dig frowns, destroy the vitality and substance of underlying tissues that keep the skin smooth and make for youthful facial contour.

Curls Not for All

THERE ARE women who [illegible] never on the curved [illegible] contingent. Certain types appear prettier, younger, more [illegible] when the hair is sleek and [illegible] without a sign of undulation. The mirror and the intelligent seeing eye will tell any [illegible] what style of coiffure best suits her features. Ann Harding [illegible] example of straight-haired [illegible]

Use Steam

STEAM softens blackheads [illegible] plugs of sebaceous fat [illegible] in the pores. Dip a towel [illegible] hot water, apply to the skin as hot as the flesh will bear. Dry, anoint with cold cream, wipe it away. Repeat the steaming and the creaming three times. A satisfactory method of renovating a dust-laden complexion.

MRS. DREAR AND MRS. CHEER

Mrs. Drear: I don't mind cooking, but washing dishes gets me down. I can hardly enjoy a meal for thinking about messy plates and greasy pots and pans.

Mrs. Cheer: I don't let myself think about it. Dishwashing is something that has to be done, like paying bills, and going to the dentist. So I take the easiest way. I use Oxydol and get it over in a jiffy.

● Oxydol is the best cure for those Dishpan Blues, and is as easy on hands as can be. Half again as much suds as other soaps, it cuts grease like lightning, whisks away all the dirt, gets you out of the kitchen in short order. And Oxydol is great in the washtub or washing machine—it doesn't ball up—every particle dissolves instantly into rich foamy suds. That's why it's so economical. And what a time and work saver too!

Mary Learning to Live Her Life Without Kim

What Has Gone Before

Mary Faith, young and comely orphan, is secretary to Mark Nesbit, wealthy young business man. She informs Mark that she is leaving her position to marry Kimberley Farrell, handsome young lawyer, to whom she has been engaged for some time. Invited to Kim's house for dinner, Mary Faith is greeted coldly by his mother. Later, Kim startles Mary Faith by breaking his engagement and asking for the ring. The next morning Mary Faith informs her co-workers that she is not to be married. She asks them to take back their presents.

Now Read On

CHAPTER 7

MARY FAITH knew she had seen her. Whenever an automobile stopped before the house Mrs. Puckett hurried to the front window. She had the ears of a fox and eyes in the back of her head.

"Yes." Mary Faith came down the hall and stood between the ruby velvet curtains that hung in the doorway of the parlor. "That was Mr. Nesbit's car. He brought me home tonight, Mrs. Puckett."

He never had driven her home before, and Mrs. Puckett knew it. Her eyebrows shot up under the fringe of her pompadour.

"Oh—ho!" she said. "So that's it! So that's why we aren't getting married in two weeks! So that's why we've changed our plans! We have a new beau!"

Miss Allie Brock raised her eyes from the game of solitaire that she was playing on the marble-topped table.

"It looks to me like a case of 'off with the old love and on with the new'," she remarked archly. "That's the way things look to me, Mrs. Puckett."

If that was the way things looked to them it was a blessing, said Mary Faith to herself. And in her heart she thanked Mr. Nesbit for driving her home.

Deading Pain

"Good night, everybody," she said and escaped from them before they could ask her any more questions.

Her room was unbearable to her that night [illegible] it was with things that reminded her of Kim. The books they had read together. The pink sprigged dishes and the etching that she had bought long ago. The scrapbook of recipes and household hints. His picture in a leather frame on her desk. His picture.

She picked it up and stood looking at it for a minute or two. Then she opened the drawer of the desk and laid it face downward under some old letters.

And for a moment she stood there pressing her hands against her heart as if she were trying to deaden the intolerable pain in it.

Once during the night she woke up.

In the darkness everything came rushing back to her—all the unhappiness of the past 24 hours.

For one black moment she knew she was sick of herself, of her life, of everything. Then the merciful weariness of utter exhaustion came over her again and she slept until morning.

September was blown away on a gale that stripped most of the branches in Haltnorth Park and tore loose one of the green shutters outside Mary Faith's bedroom windows.

Halloween came and there were little pasteboard jack-o'-lanterns on the tables in Mrs. Puckett's dining room.

Comfort in Prayer

Thanksgiving Day brought the first snow and filled the house with the rich odor of sage dressing and roast turkey.

The year before Mary Faith had gone to the Thanksgiving Day football game with Kim, chrysanthemums on her coat and windblown roses in her cheeks.

This year she went to church alone.

The words of the beautiful service for Thanksgiving kept coming back into her mind all that long lonely holiday.

"He healeth those that are broken in heart. He giveth medicine to heal their sickness."

They seemed to have been written just for her. For time, the medicine that heals those that are "broken in heart," was healing her. Her first anguish over losing Kim had settled down now to a dull and steady ache.

Once again she could pick up a book or magazine without seeing Kim's face swim across every page. She could hear the shrill ringing of the office telephone without telling herself that it might be Kim wanting to talk to her. Sometimes after work she went to the moving pictures with Jean Bartlett and found herself actually enjoying them.

Slowly, slowly, she was learning how to live her life without Kim.

A little after nine on the first morning in [illegible] Mary Faith [illegible]

Nesbit Is Hurt

At [illegible] o'clock when [illegible] came up [illegible] to see him about some orders it was still empty.

This was unusual; for Mr. Nesbit was a person of punctual and orderly habits.

At nine every morning he walked into the office. At half past five he left it. On Wednesdays he lunched at the Rotary Club. On Saturday afternoons he played golf at the Blue Valley Country Club if the weather was fine. If it was not, he played handball at the Athletic Club in town. His life was ordered [illegible] and Mary Faith knew it.

"I'll sign those orders for you, Dan," she said to the shipping clerk. "But I wonder where Mr. Nesbit is. It's not like him to be late, and not to telephone."

At eleven o'clock he did telephone from his house in Blue Valley, 30 miles away.

"I've hurt my ankle, Mary Faith," he told her. "The doctor says I'll be laid up here for a couple of weeks. So I'm going to have to ask you to bring my mail out to me. Better bring along your typewriter and anything else you need. Loft is on his way in to town to get you. Anything you want to ask me about?"

"No, Mr. Nesbit," answered Mary Faith, who always signed routine checks and orders and looked after things in general when he was not at the office.

Fifteen minutes later Loftus, his colored chauffeur, came walking into her little room with an umbrella hooked over his wrist. He carried her typewriter down to the plum-colored limousine that stood waiting in the street and held his umbrella over her carefully as she crossed the icy sidewalk.

Comfort and Warmth

"Dis is sure bad weather for drivin'," he said to her as the car found its way through the traffic of the streets. "I never knowed Mr. Mark to have an accident until dis mornin'." He shook his head.

"What happened to him, Loftus?"

"He tipped over in his car—de little gray one," the man explained. "I seen him drive out de garage and pretty soon I heard a horn tootin' and pretty soon I goes to see what's wrong out dere. And der's Mr. Mark's car throwed over in de ditch and him settin' on top of it. He made the curve too quick, he say."

The [illegible] was like a [illegible] along between high hedges of evergreen.

At the end of it stood a long low house of field stone. Smoke rose from its chimneys, giving promise of warmth and comfort within. A white collie came running across the snowy lawn from the fieldstone stable.

The car stopped and Loftus opened the door for Mary Faith with a flourish.

"Here we is, Miss Fenton!" he said. "I got you here jus' in time for lunch."

Within, the Nesbit house fulfilled its outward promise of warmth and comfort and beauty. A wood fire, crumbling to pink embers, glowed in the fireplace in the long white [illegible]. On the mantelshelf stood a jar of roses that made Mary Faith think of Haltnorth Park in June, and the carpet under her feet was springy and soft as gray-green moss.

Waiting for Her

"Mr. Mark says for Miss Fenton to come right upstairs to his study, please, ma'am," said the colored houseman who had opened the door to her and taken her typewriter from Loftus.

He led the way up the stairs and Mary Faith followed him.

[illegible] But he was not reading. His eyes were fixed on the doorway when Mary Faith stepped into it. He looked somehow as if he had been lying just that way, watching for her for a long time.

"Well, here you are." He grinned at her in welcome. "You were such a long time on the way that I was beginning to think you'd gone into the ditch the way I did."

He seemed to be very cheerful about his accident. And it struck Mary Faith that he looked younger than [illegible] with his dark hair [illegible] and his soft collar turned [illegible] above his house coat.

"Loftus had to drive very slowly," she said. "The roads are like glass and the wind tried to blow us into the ditch once or twice."

It was hard to believe in the warmth of this quiet room that a wild December gale was blowing outside and that there was ice on the roads and snow in the fence corners.

Azaleas in Dutch pots were blooming in the window [illegible] and there was a bowl of roses on the white-covered table that was drawn up beside Mark Nesbit's chair.

Typical Man's Room

"We're going to have lunch up here on this table, Mary Faith," he said. And then, without taking his eyes from her face, he spoke to the houseman: "Will you please tell Mrs. Nesbit that Miss Fenton is here, Silas? You can bring lunch up as soon as it's ready."

He took the letters Mary Faith had brought to him and tucked them into a pocket of his long wine [illegible].

"Those can wait until we've had something to eat. Move that chair closer to the fire, Mary Faith. I'm sorry I can't do it for you but I can't move out of this chair. It took Loftus and Silas to get me into it."

"Why don't you send in to town for a wheel chair? Then you wouldn't have to stay in this one room for the next week or two?" asked Mary Faith. "Not that it's an unpleasant place to be. It's a lovely, comfortable room. It's like a stage setting."

[illegible] Sleepy Hollow chair beside the grate she [illegible] at his study. It was a typical man's room—brown [illegible] couch, flat-topped desk, book shelves, fishing rods and golf sticks in a corner, photographs of [illegible] scenes on the walls. [illegible] had a cozy look as if a [illegible] had passed over it [illegible] flowers on the window sill and the brown velvet cushions on the couch.

The door opened and Mr. Nesbit's mother came in.

Mary Faith had seen her a dozen times before during the years she had worked at Nesbit's. She was a tall pretty woman with white hair that she wore in a pompadour, bright brown eyes and naturally pink cheeks. Mary Faith had always liked her looks, her soft southern voice and the air of dash with which she wore her plain well made clothes.

Meets His Mother

She had on a white linen dress now, and she was stripping a pair of white cotton gardening gloves from her hands.

"How do you do, Miss Fenton? I was listening for you." She shook hands with Mary Faith. "But I didn't hear you come in. I was in my little greenhouse at the very back of the house, taking care of my poor roses. The wind blew a pane of glass out during the night and this morning I found five of my bushes frozen."

"Have you ever tried covering them with five or six thicknesses of newspaper on cold nights?" asked Mary Faith shyly. "My mother used to have some plants in our dining room when I was a little girl. And I remember that on winter nights she used to let me help her wrap them up in newspaper."

The door opened once more and Silas came in on his felt soles, carrying a large silver tray. The meal he set out upon the table was simple and very good. Cold sliced chicken and fresh Parker House rolls with butter melting in them, orange salad and coffee in a fat silver pot.

"Newspaper! That's an idea," Mrs. Nesbit murmured as she poured out the coffee. "I wonder if brown wrapping paper wouldn't be better. It's thicker—and it seems to me we have a big roll of it downstairs."

Mary Faith nodded her head. "I suppose it would be better. My mother used newspaper probably because we always had such stacks of it in the house ... My father was a newspaperman and he never came home from the office without bringing a lot of papers with him ... I was brought up on the Kansas City Star and the Los Angeles Herald and the Atlanta Constitution. Sometimes he even brought home the London Times."

Nesbit's Discovery

Over the table she found herself talking to Mark Nesbit's mother as she never had been able to talk to Kim's mother. Telling her all sorts of things that she had half-forgotten. Things about her brilliant, improvident father who had died when she was sixteen leaving her mother and herself two thousand dollars and [illegible]

[illegible] Mrs. Nesbit went away [illegible] and Mary Faith [illegible] her shorthand pad and her pencils.

She sat down, her hands clasped at the edge of the [illegible] bowl of [illegible] her, and waited for Mark Nesbit to begin dictating to her. He had taken his letters out of the pocket of his chair and he was reading them as he filled his pipe.

Suddenly he glanced up from them and his eyes fixed themselves on Mary Faith's eyes with that intent look of his.

"You and I have known each other for four years," he said as if the thought had just struck him. "But until today I didn't know that your father had been a newspaperman. I didn't know anything really about you and your life outside my office. It's a funny thing when you stop to think about it, isn't it?"

Before Mary Faith could say a word he went on.

"A man in an office trains himself not to take a personal or sentimental interest in the young women he sees there all day long. It's one of the rules of good business that he should see them simply as fellow workers—I think that's why I've accustomed myself to think of you simply as a valuable assistant of mine and not as the very attractive girl that you are."

Mary Faith looked at him gravely. That had not been Kim's way of looking at the girl who worked in his office.

Nesbit's mother gives Mary a bunch of roses. What does this portend? Tell all your friends who are enjoying with you this absorbing story not to miss the next installment tomorrow.

Just about now the bright summer romance, which lit up all the scenery for a girl, is beginning to look as faded and washed out as her bathing suit.

If Mothers Only Knew

Thousands of Children Suffer from Worms, and Their Mothers do not know what the trouble is.

Signs of Worms are: Constipation, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full stomach with pains, pale face, eyes heavy, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, etc.

Mrs. E. W. Stephan, 31 Kenberma Road, Dorchester, Mass., wrote: — "My little girl's freedom from children's diseases, colds, constipation, etc., I attribute in a large measure to the use of Dr. True's Elixir."

Dr. True's Elixir

Laxative Worm Expeller

A pure herb medicine, not a harsh stimulator: natural relief from constipation.

That traders are not jumping to the conclusion a major reaction is under way on the evidence offered. While the setback since the highs has been sharp, it is not a positive indicator of further immediate major reversals. In fact, the steepness of the decline is enough to cause some in-and-out traders to anticipate a secondary reaction on the upside by mid-week. This group favors the tobacco, oil and specialty shares.

BANKER GIVES CREDIT PLAN

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

[illegible] gests that the United States Treasury accept war debt bonds payable on call in place of the existing long-term [illegible] were [illegible] the Hoover moratorium.

Contending that uncertainty concerning war debts is casting a shadow over business, George L. [illegible] board, National Bank of Los A[illegible]

"I should like to advance a plausible solution to an already complicated situation. A panacea for economic worldwide trade sickness could be achieved by issuance of bonds by European nations to the United States. Each European nation shall give to America bonds equal in amount to its indebtedness to this country.

The bonds shall not bear interest, as no borrowers can pay interest from the earnings of funds borrowed unless the funds are to be used for a purpose that will produce wealth; and such was not the case with the war debts. The bonds shall be payable on America's demand, with the Proviso that America shall not demand more than 20 per cent in any one year.

The bonds shall provide that when payment is demanded and secured the funds received will be spent for goods within the country making the payment.

Let us restore world confidence, world credit, world purchasing power and we will find the price of commodities will rise, business will prosper and profits will be made which will make taxes not so burdensome and will permit the liquidation of debts both public and private."

"Despite the current improvement in security prices, and an expected upturn during the next few months in industrial and commercial activity, our economic structure remains in a weakened condition owing to the existence of a number of corporations staggering under an excessive load of bank, bond and trade indebtedness," Dean Madden said.

Business revival would be enormously aided by the immediate strengthening of these weak links in the corporate chain. If minorities are permitted to put themselves in the road of legitimate attempts to avoid bankruptcy and receivership a further wave of such expensive reorganizations may occur.

EARLY LOSSES IN WALL ST. REDUCED

New York, Sept 13. Early losses of one to nine points for leaders on the New York Stock Exchange were about cut in half in afternoon transactions. Trading slowed up on the rally.

U. S. Steel which slumped more than 4 points reduced its loss to less than 3 points. The forenoon drop was generally considered the Wall St. response to Democratic victories in the Maine elections.

BONDS ALSO REACTED

Bonds also reacted [illegible] before support appeared.

In the shares market major [illegible] American Telephone reduced its loss to a couple of points after being off more than 4. [illegible] off more than 4 points before [illegible] Lackawanna [illegible] and North American and Western Union [illegible].

In the bond [illegible] the low priced rails [illegible] were under pressure. At the same time higher grade bonds held their losses to around a point in most cases and some industrial and utility obligations displayed resistance.

SEVERE CURB SLUMP

The curb market experienced its severest slump of the year in the active forenoon session today, but then reduced its losses in a brisk rally.

Speculative commitments which had been made on the long side were liquidated in substantial blocks at the opening and through the first hour or so. Yesterday's decline had caught a large volume of stop loss orders; there also appeared to be considerable short selling, the combination being sufficient to effect extreme losses ranging up to nearly 10 points in some favorites of the recent advance.

Electric Bond & Share was hammered down to a quotation under 26 for an extreme loss of about 9 points [illegible] the market hardened around noon. Other [illegible].

Closing Is Heavy in London Market

London, Sept 13. The closing was heavy on the stock exchange here today reflecting chiefly the weakness in other markets. The closings were also heavy in Paris and Berlin. In Berlin vote of nonconfidence by the Reichstag against Chancellor Von Papen and consequent political unsettlement were market factors.

Urges Stock Exchange to Modify Rules

[illegible] New York Stock Exchange [illegible] was made by Edwin Bird Wilson, president of Edwin Bird Wilson, Inc., advertising agency, in an address before the Financial Advertisers Association of New England. [illegible] investment bankers [illegible] market by restoring confidence in the investment business as a whole and [illegible].

"Investment advertising of the near future should be better advertising because the public will demand better securities," Wilson said. "For a time at least, there will be more selling through small organizations, many of the large houses having contracted their sales and sales organizations.

"Recent experiences of financial advertising men make them hopeful that the Exchange will liberalize its attitude toward members with respect to their advertising, giving them a better chance to compete advertisingly with nonmember houses of the highest type. After all, there is nothing immoral, or even unmoral, in the use of attractive borders, modern types, conservative illustrations and interesting, truthful copy in advertising space.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

If you are interested in science (and who isn't?) you'll want one of these pictures showing the earth as viewed from the stratosphere. No doubt you read how Professor Auguste Frisby ascended ten miles above the earth in a balloon to make observations. Naturally he took along a camera, and above is the very first print from the very first plate just as he developed it. Professor Frisby wants you to have one of these pictures to frame for your very own ... to send the Professor a ... at your home where he says he can explain ...

Football in the Air. | Hub's Alex the Great.
The Fighting Irish. | Baer K. O.'d Kennedy.
Team of All Nations. | Noted Joe McCluskey.

A BIT O' THIS AN' THAT, FOR A CHANGE

WE'VE BEEN TRYING to get het up about the approaching Worlds Serious. Dale Alexander's lusty larruping and the demon drive of the Braves, but the kids will not let us. Tom just came in with a shiner and his panties half ripped off by one of Martin's flying tackles. Ray is trying to touch the Old Man for the price of a new fangled headgear and George is practicsicing Boston Latin yells. What's the use of trying to fan on baseball when football is in the air? B. C., B. U. and Dartmouth already are hard at practice. Harvard dons the moleskins on Thursday. The first scholastic football games of the season take place on Saturday. The professional Boston Braves with a lineup that makes you think Lud Wray has been raiding the All Americans sweep into action a few days hence. And, Glory be, here come the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame with a backfield made up of Charlie Jaskwhich of Tipperary, Mike Koken of Kildare, Joe Sheeketski from the Lakes of Killarney and George Melinkovich, who hails from McGillicuddy's Reeks and boasts direct descent from Brian Boru and Finn McCool. They're as Irish as Paddy's pig. Three Erin Go Braghs and a Faugh A Ballagh!

THEY CALL NOTRE DAME the Fighting Irish, but the roster looks more like the Team of All Nations. According to the South Bend statisticians there are 26 nationalities represented on the squad. With 30 pure Gaelic gossoons the Irish lead the list and Old Erin's representation is swelled to 44 with six boys of German-Irish blood and eight lads who are classed respectively as American-Irish, Bohemian-Irish, French-Irish, Italian-Irish, Scotch-Irish, English-Irish, Welsh-Irish and Canadian-Irish. Exclusive of the six German-Irish and one Bohemian-German there are 18 sons of the Fatherland in Notre Dame moleskins. There are 9 Italians, 3 Englishmen, 5 Poles, 3 Spaniards, 2 Slovaks and 2 Hungarians. Other bloods represented are Austrian, Portuguese, Jewish, Belgian, Bohemian, Lithuanian, Swedish and Swiss. But bedad, there is no flowed like the shamrock!

NOTRE DAME'S FIRST Varsity probably will line up with Kosky, Polish, and Host, German, on the ends; Krause, Lithuanian, and Kurth, German, tackles; Pierce, Irish, and Harris, Welsh-Irish, guards; Gorman, Irish, center; Koken, Swedish, and Sheetzki, Polish, half backs; Jaskwhich, Polish, quarterback, and Melinkovitch, Austrian, full backs. Steve Banas, Slovak, may beat Melinkovitch for first string full back and two Frenchmen, LaBorne and Brancheau will push Koken and Sheeketski for the half back jobs. Begorrah, the "O's" and the "Mcs" better dust off the shillelahs!

TO GET MARRIED down in Connecticut you must know your athletic onions. Above all you must know the Olympian, Joe McCluskey. Anyway, when Earl Howell and Effie Fields of South Manchester, McCluskey's home town, armed with a marriage license, appeared before Harry Ginsberg, justice of the peace in New Britain, and announced they were seeking to commit matrimony the first question Ginsberg fired at the couple was, "Do you know Joe McCluskey?" Upon the pair letting go of hands so each could raise the right one, and solemnly swearing they knew McCluskey and all his records Justice Ginsberg considered them properly identified and united them in the sacred bonds of wedlock.

IT DIDN'T SEEM very clubby for all the boys to have clarioned the fact that Lee Kennedy, who was billed to crawl through the ropes against Walter Cobb and his left hook at the Fenway, once got a decision over Max Baer, without also having let the populace know that in a return bout Baer knocked Kennedy colder than a landlady's heart. The first Baer-Kennedy bout took place in July, 1930, and Kennedy copped the decision. They met again last November and Max knocked Lee out in the third round. Kennedy also was knocked out by old Paolino in four rounds and by Frankie Campbell in four. Lee lost to old George Cook, Leo Lomski, Jim Byrne, Dynamite Jackson, Al Fay and Ernest Guehring, Kennedy is "out" and Unknown Winston "in" against Walter Cobb tonight.

AS WE ARE TICKING this off on the balky old Remington —before yesterday's Athletics-Tigers game—Dale Alexander is a point ahead of Jimmy Foxx for the batting lead of the American League. The battle between Alexander and Foxx down the stretch should be a pippin. We're all rooting for Dale to give the Red Sox the first batting championship they ever had. Strange to say, despite the many great Red Sox teams, Boston is the only club in the American League which has not at some time or other boasted the league batting leader. Even Tris Speaker couldn't land it when with the Sox.

ONE OF THE remarkable things about Alexander's hitting is that he is a dead rightfield hitter and that despite the whole league knows it and they play him accordingly he still succeeds in belting them "where they ain't." He's an interesting specimen is this giant, rawboned Tennessee mountaineer. Didja ever know Dale was a great football player? Yes, Suh! Dale played with a little jerkwater college down South but was such a terror he was known all over Dixie. Scouts from Georgia, Vanderbilt and other large colleges camped on his doorstep. Dale was true to the old gal and wouldn't swap Alma Mammys. If he had you might have seen him on one of those teams Georgia has had a habit of sending North and licking Yale.

BACK TO NOTRE DAME. Maybe Ado Committo of Everett High, a couple of years hence, wouldn't fit into the team that Carrideo, Arnold and other Italians helped make famous. But we hear Committo is headed for Harvard via Exeter. There isn't anything Committo can't do with the pigskin. Everett High this year will use him as a triple threat, as he can punt, pass or run as occasion demands. Fast? On the track Ado is the fastest schoolboy sprinter in the Bay State. He's built like Paddock, with wonderfully thick sturdy legs and runs like Don Lippincott. Ralph Colson taught him to sprint. By the way, its a wonder why some college doesn't bag Colson as a trainer. He has forgotten more about athletics than most coaches know.

Yankees Win; One More Cinches Flag

Cleveland, Sept. 13 (US)—Bill Dickey's homer in the 12th inning helped toward a Yankee victory over the Indians, 8 to 7. The New Yorkers now need one more victory to win the American League pennant. Charlie Ruffing allowed the Indians 14 scattered blows.

Where Youth Waylays -:- An 'Old Man' -:- Wearing a Crown

Ouimet holes out at the 17th at Five Farms in the first round of two-day 36-hole qualifying test. He's only 38, but an old man to a lot of rampant youngsters who feel royal blood surging through their veins.

At Michigan University they call this youngster "the Owl." Because he doesn't talk much. But at Five Farms he's making plenty of noise with his woods and irons. Here you see Johnny Fischer, 20-year-old Michigan junior, splitting the fairway with one of his tremendous drives. He set the pace yesterday with a par-shattering 69.

EAGLES FINISH AT JACKSON

Jackson, N. H., Sept. 13—Ready for the long gridiron toil which lies before them, the 34 Boston College football warriors went through their final practice here in training camp this morning.

The squad breaks camp tonight and makes the long trek to Boston tomorrow.

A brisk scrimmage with all three coaches driving them was the bulk of the work this morning.

The backfield, on the face of the work accomplished here, will se Freitas, in his old job as quarterback; Pete Cheesnievitch, back again at right halfback, with Dougan and Bob Curran alternating at left halfback. Frank Maloney, the defensive back, will fill the shoes of Joe Kelly at fullback.

McKenney will greet 15 more candidates upon his return to the Heights on Thursday, when they will have their initial practice on the new Heights playing field. Ormeby will try to recruit more ends from the material which reports on that date.

Bill Kelliher expects to greet one of the largest freshman groups in years on Thursday afternoon at the Heights.

Rocknes of Lynn Join Soccer League

Rockné Club of Lynn will put a soccer team on the field this fall. They have entered the Bay State league. Candidates for the eleven are James Leydon, John O'Brien, James Morrissey, Edward Barrett, Bartholomew Whelan, John Quinn, John Ford, Michael McAdams, Lawrence Kennedy, David Fannon, Frank Scott, Edmund Trowel, Harold Nickerson, John Barrett, Charles Farrell and Vincent Tassana.

Alexander 3 Points Up on Jimmy Foxx

St. Louis, Sept. 13—St. Louis Browns and the Boston Red Sox play their final game of the season here today with Blaeholder due for the Browns and Welch slated for the Red Sox.

The Red Sox are now four games behind the White Sox and still have hopes of catching them and giving the cellar the slip before the curtain falls.

And the Red Sox also have big Dale Alexander, their .363 heavy clouter in the lineup smashing away like a savage at that baseball in a determined effort to win the A. L. batting crown. Big Alex is now three points up on Jimmy Foxx for Foxx failed in five time at bat while the Sox were idle and Alex increased his margin.

So there will be enough fans on hand today to see the fighting Red Sox and their Mr. Alexander, who are playing the kind of ball the customers like, right down to the wire.

TERRY READY TO REBUILD

New York, Sept. 13 (AP)—Bill Terry is going to get a chance to see what he can do with a team of his own making.

The Memphis slugger, who succeeded John McGraw as manager of the New York Giants in June, has signed a two-year contract, covering the 1933 and 1934 seasons Terms, it was said, were "satisfactory" both to Terry and President Charles Stoneham.

The baseball world will watch with more than a little interest Terry's efforts to reorganize a club that was in seventh place today after one of the most disastrous seasons any Giant team ever has experienced.

What the Stars Did

Ben Chapman and Bill Dickey, Yankees—Former clouted triple, latter a homer to give Yanks five runs against Indians in 12th.

Paul Waner, Pirates — His homer with one on helped beat Phillies.

Bob Grove, Athletics—Stopped Tigers, 7—1, with nine scattered hits.

Joe Kuhel, Senators—Accounted for four runs against White Sox with double, single and long fly.

Johnny Frederick, Dodgers—His pinch homer with one on in ninth beat Cubs.

CHAMPS ENTER ACE TOURNEY

By BILL GRIMES

Although they realize that their chances of holing out are very little better than those of the poorest duffer, most of the Greater Boston stars will play in the Boston Evening American's Hole-In-One tournament, which starts Sept. 27 at Franklin Park.

Among the hundreds who have already entered the Hole-In-One tournament are the holders of the four state titles, Francis Ouimet, the open champion; Eddie Kirouac, the amateur titlist; Dick Ruggles, who topped the field of juniors at Wollaston, and Leo Martin, the king of the caddys.

Granted that Francis Ouimet, Eddie Kirouac, Dick Ruggles and Leo Martin turned back all comers to annex their titles, their chances of holing out for an ace are as uncertain as those of a player who has never broken 100.

"DARK HORSE" MAY CLICK

CONDITION OF H. C. LINE WILL BABE BETTER AVERAGE 194

New York, Sept. 13—Baseball title hopes for the Yankees here today took an upward hop when it was learned that Babe Ruth's condition has steadily improved the past 24 hours.

Babe may be out of bed today. Though he must continue to guard against a recurrence of the pains in his side and fever which have kept him idle.

There is a good chance that he will be able to play in the World Series, if not before then.

Mephisto, Coste in Fenway Mat Go

Nine bouts, topped off by a two out of three fall match between Mephisto and Nick Coste, will close Charlie Gordon's outdoor wrestling season at Fenway Park tomorrow night.

In the semifinal Al Vantres will meet Bill Ruffy.

Most of the Gordon stars will appear in the preliminary bouts with such local heroes as Art Flynn and Wild William Dolan listed to meet worthy opponents.

If it rains tomorrow night the show will be held on Thursday night at Fenway Park.

CROSSLEY OF HARVARD IS 33 OUT

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 13 (AP)—Shooting a 78 for a two-day, 36-hole total of 155, Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston of St. Paul faced elimination today from qualifying in the United States amateur golf championship for the third straight year since he captured the national title in 1929.

Jack Westland of Chicago, although slipping on the inward nine, carded a 75 for his round an a 36-hole total of 146 that put him well in the lead, at least temporarily.

Westland, after a par on the difficult 14th, three-putted the next hole. He sank a 12-footer for a deuce on the 17th, but was bunkered and lost another stroke on the last hole. His total of 75 for the round gave him a two day score of 146.

CROSSLEY SHOT A 33

Wilfred Crossley, 19-year-old Boston star and Harvard freshman, shot a 33, two under par, for the best performance of the tournament over the outgoing nine. Following his first round 73, the youngster was in the thick of the medal fight. His card:

Crossley out—344 215 434—33.

John Reed, Jr., of Richmond, Va., rallying brilliantly after his first round 82, shot even par 35 for the outward nine. The Virginia youngster offset some wildness with his irons by putting sensationally. He got down a 15-footer on the eighth and another, from 25 feet, on the ninth for birdies.

Reed:

Out ..... 4 4 4 5 5 5 5 3 2—35

Maurice McCarthy, Jr., black-haired New York youngster, jeopardized his qualifying chances by going out in 39 strokes, four over par. He had a 77 yesterday and was playing no better. He displayed unusual nervousness on the greens, missing four short putts of the sort he usually knocks in easily.

McCarthy, out 4 5 4 5 3 6 4 5 3—39

Little, reached the turn in 36, only one over par, and strengthened his qualifying prospects. The San Francisco youngster, taking plenty of time with every stroke, dropped a 10-footer for a deuce on the fourth, holed another putt of five feet for a birdie on the seventh, but three-putted the ninth.

'I-Day Postponement. Will Help the Fight. Truth About Mike.

Kearns and Walker. Is Mickey Too Game? Why They Like Him.

The Walker Case; Mickey, Not Jimmy*

And I wish it was Johnny.*

The Mickey Walker-Max Schmeling fight should be a better fight because of the four-day postponement from September 19 to Friday night, September 23. There is nothing seriously wrong with Walker—and I should know because I was with him night and day through all of last week; in fact, we were up and down those Watchung Mountains so much the neighbors must have thought we were partners in a still.

Quite the reverse of being an interesting invalid, Mickey is as healthy as a steam fitter and his sturdy, compact body is as hard as sheet iron. He has trained longer and more diligently for this fight than any of his latter day battles and shows it.

But he has a two-way cut on the inside of his left forearm, where a blind boil was taken out a week ago today, which needs a couple of days of complete rest. The bout wasn't postponed because Mickey wouldn't have been in good shape on the 19th, but because he couldn't train as he wanted to in the intervening time.

The truth is that except for roadwork he was doing the bulk of his training on a backgammon board last week. And while backgammon as played by Mickey and Kearns is a noisy and boisterous pastime, it is not calculated to fit a fellow to stop Schmeling's favorite pitch.

So the extra four days will do Walker a world of good, won't hurt Schmeling, and may help the gate because Friday is a better fight night than Monday. Not that there has been any indication that the gate was going to need help. The sale has been both brisk and steady, and this is one postponement that was not caused by a pain in the box office.

A Close Corporation:

To return briefly to Kearns and Walker, they make a curious combination. Kearns is like a mother hen with one chick around, Mickey, and rarely ever lets him get out of his sight. He chases him to bed at night and chases him out of it and onto the road in the morning. And how that Walker dreads the thought of going to bed and the thought of leaving it once there! Next to Damon Runyon he is the most confirmed stayer-upper and stayer-downer it ever has been my pleasure to meet in open competition.

Once the training day is started, Kearns stays right at the Irishman's elbow, advising, instructing, urging him along. Without this driving and goading, Walker wouldn't train at all. Left alone he would take a fight with six wildcats as just another incident in his life. Born, apparently, without the slightest semblance of physical fear, Mickey would, if allowed to go as he pleased, laugh his way into a ring full of Dempseys.

It may sound foolish, but I believe he would be a better fighter if he were a little more afraid. And there isn't the slightest question that he would train more satisfactorily if he wasn't so oblivious to punches. He cuts more easily than any fighter I have ever seen, and yet there are times when he actually seems to court blows about the face and eyes which more often than not leave him cut and bruised.

The First Movie Fan:

There was another thing that I learned at Summit: The bond of friendship between Kearns and Walker is deeper and more sincere than ever it was between Kearns and Dempsey.

At heart Mickey and the Doctor are playboys, whereas at heart Dempsey probably wasn't. I imagine there were many times when Jack didn't understand his manager. But the ol' Doc and the Jerseyman are kindred spirits if ever two came along.

They even have a common interest in moving pictures which often takes them miles to find a picture they haven't seen. Each evening they leave Madame Bey's camp around 6 o'clock on a movie shopping tour which frequently takes them 40 or 50 miles. They refuse to turn back until they have found a picture new to them and seen it, and here it is Walker who sets the pace.

The Most Natural Fighter:

Mickey Walker is boxing's most natural fighter in two senses. He is a natural fighter because fighting is second nature with him and a natural fighter because he has no poise.

He is the only fighter in whose training camp I have been who didn't, if only faintly, take on the air of a Prima Donna. I mean it was easy enough to see that they were aware of the fact that they were the head men thereabouts. With Walker it's different.

From his actions you couldn't tell Mike from his sparring partners. Of course, there are subtle differences, such as the habit Pietro Corri, one of his current mates, has of carrying a piece of limburger cheese around in his pockets.

But the point is that Mickey affects no airs. To paraphrase Popeye, he is what he is. He takes life and people as he finds them, in camp and out, which no doubt helps to explain his enormous popularity. And particularly is he popular in Jersey, where he was born and brought up, and where he has lived all his life.

They like him over there. And if I, for one, had a choice in the matter, I'd rather have the home folks like me than any others. The chances are they know you best. And the further chances are that they like you not because they are unaware of your faults, but in spite of them. Which sort of liking must come pretty close to being that rare thing—real friendship.

ROOKIES HAVE DELIVERED FOR GIBSON

By JOE CASHMAN

Pittsburgh's Pirates of 1932, who come here this afternoon for three single games with our ambitious Braves, will always be remembered as a club that wasn't disappointed because it finished second.

Ordinarily, runners-up regret their failure to win the flag far more so than does any rival beneath them. That they come so close to the top without getting there causes them to shed tears aplenty over their misfortune.

But no crying room is required by Manager George Gibson and his Corsairs. They're honest enough to admit they didn't expect to escape the second division this season and to be genuinely delighted over their feat of finishing second.

SHAKY START HURT

A rather shaky start and a 12-game losing streak, which they were in the midst of when they were last in Boston, cost the Pirates the pennant.

The youth and inexperience of several of their stars was responsible for that flop. On the other hand, these same kids who cracked are the very ones who are responsible for a club that figured to finish no higher than sixth being in second place today. So only praise can be bestowed upon them.

"If we finish in the first division, I will consider myself the most lucky manager in the game," Gibson told your correspondent on his last visit to town.

"It's not in the books for any pilot to come up this season with more than one rookie who proves able to play regularly. I have found four this year in Vaughan, Piet, Barbee and Grace, who have become stars. So I'll not have a complaint regardless of what happens to us from here in, if we stop in the first four.

GIVES ROOKIES CREDIT

George still feels the same way about it.

"It was natural for my rookies to have one bad spell," he says. "True, their brief collapse may have cost us the pennant, but what of it?

"They've been good enough to bring us home second and that, to my way of thinking, indicates that with the experience they have gained, they will improve enough to steer us to the top next season."

Few changes are expected to be made in the Pirates before the next campaign. Capt. Pi Traynor, regular Somerville boy, has enjoyed one of his greatest seasons and though he has been active a dozen years, he's still the best third-sacker in either league and will be again in 33.

The pitchers, Lloyd and Paul, and Dave Barbee leave Gibson without an outfield worry.

Both Piet, at second, and Vaughan at short should be still better after a remarkable first season and a classier all-round first-sacker Gus Suhr would be hard to find.

Grace, Padden and Finney give them all the catching strength needed. And there's nothing the matter with a pitching staff which includes Meine, Swift, Swetonic, French, Chagnon, Harris, Spencer, Kremer and Brame, though a few of these are getting old and a little new blood wouldn't hurt.

Manager Bill McKechnie of the Braves is busy these days denying rumors of the sale of many of his stars. Like all pilots, he would trade to strengthen his club but the chances is he has received no offers for any of his men.

stated that the hole would be a No. 6 or a spade mashie shot. Apparently many golfers have been misled by that statement, believing that the rules called for players using the above mentioned irons. Such is not the case, for contestants may use any club in the bag from a driver to a putter.

FIVE SHOTS APIECE

Each entrant will be allowed to play five shots. There will be a white circle on the green and all balls within this ten foot radius will be measured and tabulated.

Other than that they are required to fill out an entry blank, use their own clubs and supply their own balls, the contestants are in no manner obligated to the Boston Evening American.

There is NO entry fee.

If you think there is no Hole-In-One, a champion will nevertheless be crowned, for the player whose ball stops nearest the cup will be the winner and will be presented with an expensive sport wrist watch. A complete set of golf clubs, three woods, nine irons, and a bag is second prize and the owner of the ball which stops third away from the goal, will take home three wooden clubs, seven irons and a bag, while the fourth prize will be a Kennedy sport suit, the fifth, three matched woods and the sixth and last prize five matched irons.

If you have not already entered the Boston Evening American's Hole-In-One tournament, do so at once. Regardless of your ability or the lack of it, you have an equal chance with any of the outstanding stars.

200 POUNDERS JOIN B. U. SQUAD

Boston University's football hopes took a decided upward turn today when it was learned that two 200-pound transfer students and a third husky lineman who has never played for the Terriers will wear the Red and White this coming season.

The two transfer students have been enrolled at the university for one year and are eligible under the athletic rules to play this season as neither has played his allotted three years of college football.

The three are Horrie Call, 200-pound tackle, Alfonso Alibertl, 204-pound guard, and Edwin Mitchell, guard and tackle. These three boys have changed the feeling of the Terrier coaches from one of pessimism to one of confidence in regard to the coming season.

K. O. COBB TOPS ARGONNE CARD

By RINGSIDE

Walter Cobb of New York and his mighty left hook will try to make a wash-up of Unknown Winston of Waterbury, Ct., when they mingle in a ten-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at Fenway Park tonight.

The record books bear testimony to the fact Cobb has won 40 of his last 46 starts by knockouts. In his recent Boston start, Cobb was returned a winner over Jack Sigmors of Cambridge on a technical knockout in four heats.

Les Kennedy of California was originally scheduled to meet Cobb, but he got cold feet over a cold in his feet, or vice versa, and stepped out of the match.

Sergt. Eddie Mack went into the wide open ranges and got Winston when Kennedy failed to come up for the bell. Winston has been battling all comers in Connecticut and Springfield rings.

The six-round semifinal will feature Baby Jack Renault of Cambridge and Tony Aquano of Lynn. There also will be six four-rounders.

Stein Joins Dodgers

New York, Sept. 13 (INS)—Sammy Stein, professional wrestler, today signed to play with the Brooklyn Dodgers pro football eleven.

TOUGH PULL AHEAD FOR CASEY

Eddie Casey will have to be a "miracle man" to pull Harvard through the coming football campaign with as much success as Eddie piled up a year ago, his first season as head coach of the Crimson.

The Crimson will open with Buffalo on October 1 after only 13 days of preliminary work. New Hampshire follows the New Yorkers a week later. Both are mere warmups for the Crimson horde.

But the remainder of the schedule is another matter. Penn State, a newcomer on the Harvard schedule will have strength.

After Penn State comes Dartmouth, and while the Big Green has lost considerable by graduation, so also has the Crimson and that evens up matters.

The Brown Bruin returns to the Stadium after a lapse of a few years. According to all indications, Coach McLaughry has the makings of another fine eleven. On October 8 West Point marches into town. Even with the loss of its star back, Ray Stecker, the Army will prove one of the toughest foes on the entire schedule.

Holy Cross retains its pre-Yale game position on the Crimson schedule. According to Capt. John McEwan, the Crusaders have potentially one of the greatest elevens in their history.

Holy Cross will be the last team Harvard will face in the Stadium. And even if it comes out of the Stadium undefeated, with victories over Army, Penn State, Dartmouth, Brown and H. C., it still has an affair with Yale in the Bowl.

Undoubtedly this is the most difficult schedule the Crimson officials have ever drawn up. But then, she list of Harvard elevens a year ago did not contain any soft snaps. So maybe Casey can repeat his performance of a year ago.

GRID BRAVES SCRIMMAGE

The serious business of knocking the opposing linemen dead in a double scrimmage session at the Lynn Stadium will occupy Coach Lud Wray's band of 40 Braves grid stars today.

There are now two score players in uniform, but this number will be slashed to 20 before the Braves open the professional season against Benny Friedman's Dodgers at Braves Field Oct. 2.

This cutting the pro squad in half has a stimulating effect on the Wray coached club. Everyone is trying his best to turn in All-American performances in the daily workout. The result is eminently to Coach Wray's satisfaction.

The arrival of Reggie Westfall, former Ohio Wesleyan star, added measurably to the Braves grid galaxy as they swung through their two contact drills to open the week's work.

Wray's three quarterbacks are now driving units through a repertoire of eight plays. To see such backs as Tony Plansky, the ex-Georgetown pile driver; Cliff Battles, the West Virginia boy, and Jim Musick of California sweep through tackle slants behind a perfectly functioning line, is an edifying sight.

Grid Challenge

The Dorchester Town Team, which opens its grid season with Dedham Town team at Dedham Sept. 18, is composed of former college stars. They desire semi-pro foes. Call Dick Erlichman, Highlands 7472.

Game starts at 5:30

Waltham and Allston, opening their series for the Boston Twilight League championship, grab off the semi-pro baseball spotlight at Smith Field, North Brighton, tonight.

Allston, which won both halves of the Boston Twilight League season, is something like a 5-3 favorite to walk off with four games and the title, but it will find the Waltham team much more rugged than it has been all during the season.

WALTHAM STRENGTHENED

That the Watch City nine has picked up a lot since the regular campaign ended was disclosed when the team just breezed through Concord and South Boston with four straight wins to gain a play-off place with Allston.

Natoli will probably be the Waltham hurler this evening in the series opener.

St. Thomas gave Waltham and Allston a fine break for their series' start by polishing off Roslindale, 9 to 8, to make it four wins out of six games and to retire the City League crown. St. Thomas showed plenty of power with the willow, blasting Bill Barrett from the hill in the second frame with eight runs.

CITY LEAGUE LIST ENDED

The City League is now all through, although St. Thomas and Roslindale, as well as the other league teams, will play barnstorming games from now until they put up the goal posts in the city parks and force the ballplayers into hibernation.

There is still a series to be played in the Suburban Twilight League and semipro baseball interest hereabouts will be maintained for a few more weeks to come.

BOIL EPIDEMIC HITS RINGMEN

New York, Sept. 13 (INS)—The boil epidemic today brought a new low in fistic endeavors.

Following the postponement of the Mickey Walker-Max Schmeling fight to September 23 because of a boil on Walker's left arm, it was announced last night's bout here between Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion, and Lew Kirsch was off. Kirsch is suffering from a boil on the nose.

SET SEPT. 27 FOR BOUT

The Canzoneri fight will be advanced to September 27.

Walker, at his training camp at Summit, N. J., probably will start boxing on Wednesday or Thursday. Schmeling, training at Speculator, N. Y., was undecided on his program for today, but probably will continue boxing workinuts.

TAP'S TRIPLE COMBINATION

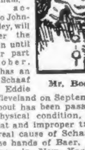
A full moon and a sky full of stars ought to make it easy for the star gazers to pick the famous three numbers for Tap's cartoon today. Today we are told the planet Taurus is strongly influencing the earth's affairs, and up jump the little numbers you see in the drawing. You never can tell when you might find use for a few extra numbers, so here are three to paste in your hat.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

ERNIE SCHAAF has wisely decided to accept the advice of Jack Sharkey in regard to training methods.

Schaaf intends to sell his yacht, while I understand his Chinese cook is already looking for a new job. Ernie plans to give up his ritzy apartment near the Chestnut Hill reservoir, and make his future headquarter, at his mother's home in Wrentham.



Mr. Boston

Schaaf according to Johnny Buckley, will not enter the ring again until the latter part of October. Buckley has an offer for Schaaf to meet Eddie Sims in Cleveland on September 26, but this bout has been passed up.

Poor physical condition, caused by the heat and improper training, was the real cause of Schaaf's defeat at the hands of Baer. Schaaf licked Baer in New York, and should be able to repeat if in good condition.

Schaaf is only 22 years of age. His future is still ahead of him.

Sharkey Getting Restless

JACK SHARKEY, back in town following a fishing trip with George (Kid) Lee to Moosehead Lake, Me., was on his way to this office to give us a large hello as we reached Winthrop sq. on our way for a cup of java.

"I'm going to New York to see the Schmeling-Walker bout," said Sharkey. "I'll probably be battling the winner in a title defense contest next June.

"When I come back from the big scrap, I'm going to step into the gym and do some work myself. It's almost three months since I have had a glove on and I need a little sharpshooting exercise against a first-class sparring partner.

"I have spent the summer at Bow Lake, N. H., and in Maine. I have tramped hundreds of miles through the woods. Do you know I only weigh 210 pounds?

"My left ankle, which I injured when I slipped on a rock at Bow Lake, is okay again.

"I am glad to hear Ernie Schaaf has made new training plans. The world hopped on Ernie because he happened to lose to Baer. No fighter wins all his battles. Ernie is entitled to drop one now and then. He'll be right back in the thick of things soon. And with Jack Sharkey still one of his managers."

Call It Ballyhoo

THE NOBLE New York sports writers insist that Schaaf's recent blast at Sharkey was a ballyhoo stunt in an effort to put Ernie back into the news following his upset at Chicago. It has got to a point in the boxing game where a legitimate flareup is laughed off by the fans. Perhaps the fans exercise fine judgment in such matters.

Callahan Meets Lefty

ANDY CALLAHAN of Lawrence, who recently won from Harry Dublinsky at Chicago, will meet Young Lefty in a 10-round bout at Fall River tomorrow night. Lefty is a Fall River ring hero, and the home town boys say he will toss the New England lightweight champion for a loss.

COE'S LADYSMAN BEST JUVENILE

By LOUIS W. BINDMAN

New York, Sept. 13 (INS)—By his recent, magnificent victory in the Hopeful stakes, W. R. Coe's Ladysman, outstanding juvenile of the year, has struck fear in the hearts of other juvenile owners.

With the world's richest two-year-old classic, the Futurity, coming up for decision at Belmont Park Saturday, owners are beginning to display a decided waning in active interest, though public interest still runs high.

With a $1000 entry fee facing them, some owners are debating the wisdom of paying the high fee in the hope that their candidates can carry off third or fourth money.

SUN ARCHER SECOND

So high is Ladysman in their estimation that many of them have practically conceded the winning portion of the purse to him and the second cut to W. S. Kilmer's "likeliest contender," Sun Archer.

"It's a two-horse race," is the trend of conversation.

For this reason a small field may face the starter.

The Greentree Stable, however, not to be easily frightened, is grooming its Champagne winner, Dynastic, in an effort to carry off not only third or fourth money, but conceding nothing, aims to win the converted prize.

LADYSMAN OUTSTANDING

Victory in this 44-year-old classic will so firmly entrench Ladysman in the juvenile throne that, according to present indications, difficulty may be encountered in filling the fields of all his future engagements.

Some turfmen, however, scout this belief, claiming that "a true sportsman knows no fear" and these sportsmen may supply ample contention for the Coe champion.

Who'll Play Football?

The City Point A. C. of South Boston, would like games for the coming football season. Prefers games out of town. Will go any distance as far as Worcester. The City Point team average is 140 to 150, ages 17 to 19.

Workers Idle While Administration Dallies

Any banker who knows his business is more interested in a customer who can make legitimate use of the bank's credit facilities than in the depositor who asks the bank to earn interest for him on the money he entrusts to it. The customer who is in a position legitimately to borrow from a bank works for the bank and is making money for it, while in the case of deposited money it is the bank which is working for the depositor.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is in effect a huge bank. It is in possession of great resources and therefore great credit power. It has a bank's interest in the legitimate employment of the credit it is in a position to extend. It cannot meet the purposes and expectations of Congress or the people in its creation if it becomes a mere hoarder of the money appropriated for its use.

UNEMPLOYMENT CAN ONLY BE RELIEVED BY EMPLOYMENT. MEN CANNOT WORK UNLESS THEY HAVE WORK TO DO. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been clothed and equipped with the power to provide jobs for the unemployed. It must exert its power—not let it lie unused.

As it scans the present situation in industry it should fasten its gaze quickly upon projects which are well conceived and practicable. If such projects are already initiated and have already received substantial financial backing from interests not connected with the Federal Government, they should be seized upon by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as fortunate aids in the great work which it has in hand.

To carry forward these great and meritorious undertakings would involve the immediate re-employment of thousands of deserving workmen now unemployed.

It seems strange that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should not upon its own initiative proceed to canvass the possibilities and the merits of these projects from the standpoint of its own program and with exclusive regard to the corporation's distinctive role as a public instrumentality.

Connecticut Should Send Lonergan to Senate

The nomination of Augustine Lonergan for United States Senator from the State of Connecticut reflects great credit upon the Democratic Party in Connecticut.

Representative Lonergan is classified in Connecticut as a Smith man and was urged for the nomination by the so-called "old guard" of the Democratic Party, which is still loyal to ex-Governor Smith.

The Smith forces deserve congratulation for pressing the nomination of so competent a candidate with such sound Democratic principles.

It is not strange that the ardent supporters of Governor Roosevelt, who are called the "new guard," were able to unite with the "old guard" in Mr. Lonergan's nomination.

His record in public life and in Congress is a party asset and richly entitled him to the nomination.

As a representative in Congress, Mr. Lonergan has opposed our entry into the League of Nations, and in every way striven to keep the United States free of European entanglements.

He has opposed adherence to the World Court.

He has advocate and supported a sales tax.

He has firmly opposed cancellation of Europe's war debts to the United States.

He has been steadily for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

In these attitudes, boldly taken and consistently adhered to, one finds the delineation of a true American and a genuine Democrat.

It is good to see the Democratic Party getting back to the sound Democratic ground of the founders of the party.

The election of Mr. Lonergan to the Senate would strengthen that body and hearten the country.

He deserves the support of his fellow citizens in Connecticut regardless of party.

New Word Wanted

"They do it much better in——"

You name the country. Also name the person who is continually repeating that hackneyed phrase—name him whatever appeals to you. It will be perfectly all right with real Americans.

Of course, that "line" is employed by the so-called "smart people" who like to let others know that they have been abroad and, therefore, know all about things—anything, in fact.

They like to repeat that phrase—to them it seems to cover the entire situation, whatever the situation may be:

"They do it much better in——"

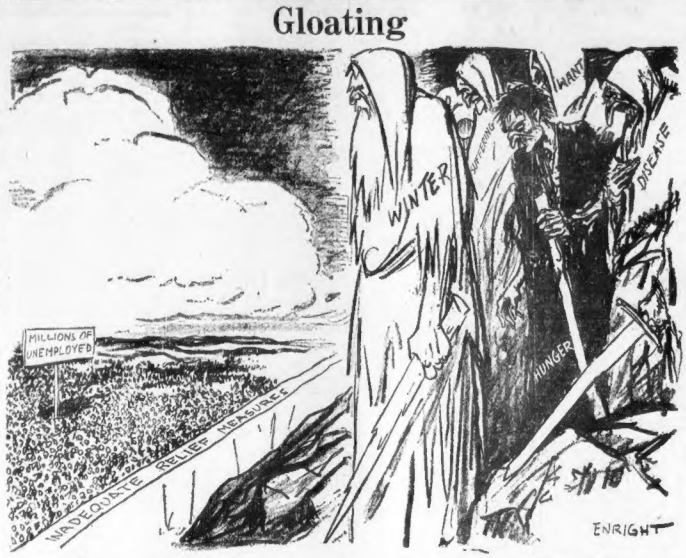
Whenever you hear that phrase you may be fairly certain that the speaker is a person who has been abroad possibly once—maybe not at all.

And you may set him down as a person who wouldn't leave much of a dent in society if he would pack his toothbrush and move over to one of those countries that do everything so well—and then hear his tears spattering on the cobblestones and his wails as he pleads to come home.

There ought to be a name for that sort of a person—a sort of composite word built of "expatriate" and "disloyalty."

Perhaps the Greeks had a word for it.

Gloating



Old Winter comes to gloat again
On harvests ripe to reap,
The Valley of Forgotten Men
Where human life is cheap.
Disease and Hunger at his call
And Poverty and Grief,
He waits outside the flimsy wall
Of hand-to-mouth relief.

He comes again to scourge a land
Where wealth is manifold,
Where Labor walks with empty hand
Amid a hoard of gold,
Where millions ask for warmth and food
And honest work to do
But starve on pious platitude
And bunk and ballyhoo.

New York Day by Day

Jobless in the Park

NEW YORK, Sept. 13—Dwellers among dizzy spires flanking all sides of Central Park have usually looked down upon an entrancing vista in the early morning. The park in the pink of dawn is a fairyland. Artifical lakes, wisteria bowers, and meadows silt by graveled paths.

There is the sheep pasture and its chaparral, the ancient herder and his faithful collie. In the center the thin pale upshoot that is the Egyptian obelisk. Clumps of greenery, rocky out-crops, arbored archways, and that elevated path that circles about the reservoir.

Too, the beautiful Shakespeare garden of flowers in marvelous landscaping, the bridle path with its gaily habited riders flashing underneath quaint foot-bridges, the zoo and its cluster of feathers and furs—all in a magnificent panorama for the city bound.

But that picture has been changed for the early risers. Today the scene is splashed with tragedy. In the park these nights an army of the jobless, the hopeless and beaten, bivouac there, moving off sluggishly when the first streak of light sifts across the eastern sky.

Most of them, heavy with sleep, slink to various entrances, look furtively about and vanish with the morning mist. There are many who are professionals but the larger number are men, sometimes women, who are having their first experience with the submerged.

I stopped by one of the two remaining tattoo caves along the Bowery the other evening. The proprietor, with fiercely bristling mustachios, reported business brisker than a year ago. He attributed it to the desire of entrants into freak marathons to be tattooed. "Being before the public," he explained, "they like to be fancied up."

Incidentally, there is a celebrated tenor who, in student days, expressed a sense of frolic by having a heart of red, lettered with initials of his own and those of a sweetheart, tattooed on his forearm. Their romance dwindled and years later he read of her marriage. He was telling a friend of their devotion in earlier years and bared his arm to show the initialed insignia of their devotion. But hers had disappeared into a faint smudge. Boo!

My Grand Central correspondent postcards about a little old lady buying a ticket for Chicago. The clerk inquired: "Want to go by Buffalo?" She sniffed: "Certainly not. I want to go by train."

Radio, curiously enough, has not only been a boon to at-liberty stage stars but has in one notable instance given a passe stage singer a fresh start on the stage. So extraordinary was his radio success he was booked for 20 weeks over a stage circuit at the biggest salary he ever received.

There are many instances of new careers out of calamity these days when so many are stressing gloom. A clerk in a down-town bond house lost not only his job but his 15 years' savings in the same bonds he sold to others. Two years ago when I talked to him he was ready for the river. The other day I saw him in a sportive looking car of impish red. During the tedium of his long lay-off he had devised a toy for his child. A toy concern paid him $10,000 outright for it and a retainer, twice his bond house salary, to think up other things.

And, pardon the personal touch, but it was only after everything else fizzled I thought up this quixotic adventure in syndication. Not so much, but it's a living!

Listen, World!
By Elsie Robinson

"I Want to Be Restless"

DID YOU EVER see Helen Wills Moody?

You will not forget her face easily, if you have.

Her face is something more than beautiful. It is very quiet, and strong, and serene. Yet, when you have seen all that, you still feel that there is something more in those deep eyes which has escaped you.

But what else could there be in that lovely face, or in that lucky young life? Though only 25, she has already found romance, adventure and fame. Surely, she should be satisfied! And yet, is she?

Elsie Robinson

Probably Dr. Will Durant was wondering that when he wrote a certain question and sent it to a number of famous people.

"WHAT MEANING HAS LIFE FOR YOU?" was the question.

What meaning need life have, save happiness, for that competent, confident young woman with the quiet eyes? Yet, back came this amazing answer:

"I WANT TO BE RESTLESS!"

With all the beauty and power of life within her hands, Helen Wills Moody yet wants to be—on her way.

How amazing?

How wise!

Almost a miracle that the happiness and success which ruin so many young spirits should not have blinded her straight eyes.

She sees clearly that thing which some of us never see, which others only see when it is too late:

THE MOMENT WE ARE SATISFIED, THAT MOMENT WE BEGIN TO DIE.

ONLY THOSE WHO ARE NOBLY RESTLESS AND NOBLY DISCONTENTED, ONLY THOSE WHO KEEP STRIVING, KEEP SEARCHING FOR GREATER, FINER EXPRESSION, REALLY LIVE.

Helen Wills Moody could exist with every comfort in a beautiful HOME. She could go gaily from place to place, enjoying new triumphs. She could see and be seen by every famous person on earth. There is hardly anything which she might ask of life which is not hers for the taking. And yet—

"For me," she says, "Life is interesting, entertaining, happy. If only I can have some activity for the restlessness that is in my heart. I want that activity to be ceaseless, never finished, and I would like to have it at almost all times dominating my thoughts.

"I WANT TO BE RESTLESS I WANT ALWAYS TO BE IN ACTION, AND TO BE TRYING FOR SOME KIND O,' BEAUTY AND PERFECTION."

And, indeed, that "constant search for some kind of beauty and perfection" is the only thing that does make life worth while. Without that, a human being might as well be a slug. Any kind of a biped can lead a contented life, if you give it food and shelter and a mate.

BUT ONLY A MAI DARES TO TURN HIS BACK ON COMFORT, SAFETY AND PLEASURE, TO LEAD A RESTLESS LIFE.

It is the God in man that makes him want to do it—dare to do it. For the restlessness in a man that makes him search for beauty and truth IS GOD MOVING THROUGH HIM—God, still at HIS job of making a man out of mud.

AND THE MAN WHO FOLLOWS HIS OWN NOBLE RESTLESSNESS, WALKS WITH GOD.

Fisherman Philosophy

A fisherman will rise at 4 and tip-toe softly from the door
And smile to see the morning sun come up with shafts of flame,
And with the sweet breeze at his throat, he'll sing the while he rows his boat
And take the burdens of his sport as parcels of his game.
He'll never sit around and whine because he gets a tangled line
Nor whimper that his lot is hard the days when bites are few;
But knowing where the big ones lurk, with brain and brawn he'll gladly work
And count the day well spent when he comes home with one or two.

A fisherman may weary grow, but seldom will he let you know,
Or count the troubles of his sport above the pleasure gained.
Should bait be lost or leader break, such slight annoyances he'll take
As part of every angler's lot and easily explained.
No fisherman will sit and cry and all the hardships magnify
Nor tell what drudgery it is to wade in stream or bay.
He'll even, safe at home at night, with smiles of rapturous delight
Recount the thrilling story of the fish that got away.
So let's be fishermen, I say, and count what blessings fall our way
And take the disappointments and the burdens as they come.
Let's look on pain and care and strife as incidents of human life,
And not sit sighing o'er our woes till everyone is glum.
Let's reckon in the angler's way the final total of the day.
The beauty seen, the friends we've met, the little joys we've claimed,
And though we come back home at night, both bruised and weary from the fight
Of goals we've tried in vain to reach, we need not be ashamed.

Intelligent Voting In a Democracy
By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

THE MOST DAMNING indictment drawn against democracy in America by its enemies is based largely upon the charge that the people in the mass so frequently vote unintelligently, dominated more by unreasoning prejudice than by their own interest. The Hoover High Command is counting upon this weakness this year, as never before. That is the reason for the deceptive if not dishonest ballyhoo about the returning of prosperity.

Within twenty-four hours the friends of democratic institutions, who still believe they are workable, have had two reasons for encouragement. The New Jersey Federation of Labor has denounced the policies of Mr. Hoover and declared unequivocably for Mr. Roosevelt; and Mrs. Charles Sabin, who has fought prohibition consistently and honestly, has announced that she will urge the election of the man who stands four-square on the platform for which the enemies of prohibition have been contending.

Here we have two illustrations of the intelligent exercise of the right of citizenship.

Labor Vote Is Given Warning

There is scarcely a single intelligent reason, based on facts, that can justify, not only the jobless but the working class, in voting for "four years more of Hoover." The resolution adopted by the Jersey Federation says of the latter:

"He has demonstrated by his acts on legislation such as the vetoing of the Wagner unemployment bills . . . that he is not sympathetic to labor, and labor can expect very little from him if re-elected."

It might have gone much further and been consistent with the contentions of organized labor during the last two years. It has denounced, from time to time Mr. Hoover's hostility to public building programs to create work; to his stubborn opposition to the use of a penny of Federal money for the relief of the starving. It would have been strange indeed had the Jersey Federation of Labor locked arms with Wall Street! and for Mr. Green to have paraded arm in arm with Ogden Mills.

Intelligence in Politics

Mrs. Sabin is an intelligent foe of prohibition.

Having taken a position on it, along with all other professed enemies" of the "noble experiment," she follows her intelligence into politics and government. And having declared for the program, along with all other foes of prohibition, which the Republican convention refused to adopt at the behest of Mr. Hoover, and which the Democratic convention adopted overwhelmingly, her intelligence makes her course clear.

Intelligence makes clear the duty of every other foe of the 18th Amendment and the Volstead Act. The issue has been made so distinct and unescapable that no foe of prohibition, following his or her intelligence, can follow any other course than that of Mrs. Sabin, who declares for Roosevelt on the prohibition issue.

Voters Must Have Facts

However, it is not quite fair to charge unintelligent voting against the people. They can vote intelligently only when they are in possession of the facts. The policy of the Hoover High Command is to confuse and deceive them on the facts. Thus the organized ballyhoo about the upward trend of business and the early turning of the corner of prosperity.

One illustration: The other day the newspapers of the country carried the story that a great steel corporation had announced its intention to spend $5,000,000 on improvements and repairs. This was conspicuously displayed. The purpose was to deceive the people into believing that this means a great improvement on the year before. More men were to be put to work on improvements and repairs than were engaged last year. More material would be required—and this would mean more work.

Now where is the crookedness in that statement? Just here: This same great steel corporation which is going to spend $5,000,000 on improvements and repairs this year spent $31,000,000 on improvements and repairs last year.

The story as given to the people conveys the impression that a five-million-dollar expenditure means just that much added for business and employment, whereas it really means that only one-sixth as much is to be spent as was spent last year. Instead of being better it is six times worse.

Prejudices Stimulated

The strategy clearly is to deceive the people as to conditions, if possible, by disseminating false information disguised as unpolitical "news," and to mobilize all possible prejudices and hates having no remote connection with intelligent action. The spokesmen of the Administration, all secondraters thus far, have resorted to the most reckless misrepresentations: and others, like Senator Moses, are specializing on arousing prejudices having no relation to the issues of the campaign.

Senator Moses is a specialist in this line—he and Mr. Lucas. He was part of the conspiracy, of which Mr. Hoover was cognizant in 1928, to arouse religious and racial prejudices against Al Smith. His notorious letter unhappily for him uncovered him completely in that campaign. When this Senator, with his record, and the part he played in the most infamous of all campaigns has the effrontery to appear in Massachusetts in the role of a friend of Al Smith, the wonder is that he is not hissed from the platform. We who fought for Smith, and stood out against the low prejudices the Moses of that campaign were arousing can only marvel at the impudence of the speaker, and even more at the patience of an audience in Boston that "must have been cognizant of the hypocrisy of his performance."

Double-Dealing, G. O. P. Strategy

Misrepresentation — appeals to prejudices based on falsehoods—and double-dealing with the people—this plainly is the strategy of the high-minded Hoover Command. The latter is illustrated in the case of Vice-President Curtis' appearance in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Curtis is a dry—dry as dust. He stands enthusiastically and four-square for the 18th Amendment and the Volstead Act. He makes no secret of his position. Thus his assignment to wet Pennsylvania was unfortunate. Protests were heard, and the party management in that State attempts to reassure the liberals with the announcement that Mr. Curtis will conceal his Anti-Saloon League views while there. Mr. Curtis will hereafter be kept out of the liberal East and be asked to confine his defence of prohibition to dry territory. Imagine Curtis in Boston!

To the student of democracy the reactions of the people to the strategy of Wall Street's candidate will be the most interesting feature of the campaign.
